

No scope for extremism in the name of Islam

Stresses PM, assures businessmen of actions against bombers

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Export-oriented garment and textile sector leaders yesterday told the prime minister that most of the prospective foreign buyers have cancelled their recent scheduled visits to Bangladesh due to the August 17 countrywide blasts.

They said buyers are observing the post-bombing scenario cautiously and are likely to shift their focus from Bangladesh to other alternative markets for their outsourcing destinations if the situation worsens.

The leaders of Bangladesh Garment Manufacturers and Exporters Association (BGMEA), Bangladesh Knitwear Manufacturers and Exporters Association (BKMEA) and Bangladesh Textile Mills Association (BTMA), who called on the PM at her office, urged her to take immediate steps to arrest the perpetrators of the explosions.

The prime minister told them the government will take immediate steps to arrest the offenders and take stern actions against them.

"Bangladesh is a moderate Muslim country and there is no scope for practising extremism in the name of Islam," sources quoted the prime minister as saying.

She added that the blasts were made at a time when Bangladesh is making good progress in attaining desired economic growth and attracting foreign investment.

The textile sector leaders, expressing their anxiety, said if the offenders cannot be identified and go unpunished, the situation would go out of control.

The three premier apparel sector bodies called upon the government and the main opposition to work together for upholding the country's image amid this crisis.

Khaleda also urged the leaders of the opposition parties to work together for identifying the "enemies of the nation."

The textile sector leaders have plans to arrange a dialogue between Prime Minister Khaleda Zia and the Leader of the Opposition Sheikh Hasina to discuss the national crisis emanating from the August 17 blasts, sources said.

Earlier at a joint press conference of the three organisations, BGMEA President Annisul Huq said recurrence of such bombings may label Bangladesh as a terrorism-prone country and can even link it to international terrorism.

"The government and the opposition parties must come forward to identify the culprits and punish them, giving up the blame-game practice," BKMEA President Fazlul Haque said, reading out a joint statement at the press conference.

Such destructive activities will not only hamper smooth production at factories, affecting the country's overall exports, but will also

INSIDE THE MILITANT GROUPS-3

Extremists get trained in armed combat

ZAYADUL AHSAN

On January 22, 2001, Chittagong police held Salumullah Selim, a 45-year-old man, from a residence in the port city. On interrogation, they learned the true nature of his identity -- he is the army chief of an Arakan militant outfit called Arakan Rohingya National Organisation (ARNO). Records showed he was previously arrested in 2000.

More quizzing brought out further startling information. He admitted to police that he trained local madrasa students in armed combat. According to him, more trainers from African and Middle Eastern countries frequently visit Bangladesh to train local Islamist militants.

Away in the forest of Bandarban, police followed a narrow trail through rows of betel nut trees. The forest, about 25km from the town, was dense and dark. One had to walk for two and a half hours and cross two streams and hillocks to reach a thatched structure.

The hut is a madrasa. Boys take religious lessons during the day; night turns it into a militant camp to train the same madrasa students in arms and explosives.

This was one of the many madrasas that militants use as training centres. Three of them were sealed by the government after police raids found dummy rifles for training. They have mustered enough capability to create a dangerous situation, a Special Branch report in 2003 warned.

A more revealing comment came from Sayed Kawsar Husain Siddiki, chairman of now banned militant group Shahadat Al Hiqma. On February 8, 2003, he said in a press conference in Rajshahi that Hiqma arranges arms training to its members.

"Our commando fighters can conduct an attack at any place in 24 hours," Kawsar boasted. He was later arrested in a sedition case for

Massive hunt for blasts coordinator

STAR REPORT

Law enforcers have started a massive hunt to nab a man, who coordinated the bomb attacks in two districts of Khulna division, an investigator said.

Soon after four arrestees mentioned his name during interrogation at the JIC (Joint Interrogation Cell), members of law enforcement and intelligence agencies started operation to trap him.

Another source however told The Daily Star at 9:20pm yesterday possibly the coordinator has already been nabbed and is on way to Dhaka.

He would be presented before the four arrestees to verify him and his role in the August 17 blasts.

The source said two arrestees from Satkhira and two others from Kushtia admitted at the JIC the man was in charge of coordination and supplying bombs.

"It will be a significant progress in investigation if the arrestees can identify the coordinator," the investigator said.

The government yesterday arrested former Islamic Foundation director Moulana Fariduddin Masud, off-loading him from an Emirates flight at Zia International Airport on suspicion of his links to an Islamist militant network.

Sources in the law enforcement agencies said he is suspected to have a connection with the August 17 blasts.

Masud, who was on the way to London, was arrested at around 10:00am by the Immigration Police under high-level government instruction.

However, the government is playing hush-hush on the arrest. It is not clear now which law enforcement agency has taken him into custody.

When contacted, the immigration officials at ZIA expressed their ignorance about Masud's arrest. The officer in charge of the Airport Police Station also gave a similar response to The Daily Star.

But intelligence sources point out that after the immigration police arrested him, Masud was taken to an

Bounty for JMB's Abdur Rahman

Govt finally orders his arrest

SHARIEF KHAN

Initially confined to blaming Awami League for the August 17 blasts, the government has finally identified Jama'atul Mujahideen Bangladesh (JMB) leader Abdur Rahman as a top threat to the country and ordered the law enforcers to arrest him "at any cost".

A competent source in the Rapid Action Battalion (Rab) said that the government is now ready to pay several lakh taka for leads about the possible hideout of Abdur Rahman, the mastermind behind the near simultaneous blasts of Wednesday.

"The evidence against Rahman and JMB is too overwhelming to be lulled into the false sense that they constitute no threat," said a source. So far, all the arrested JMB men have given identical confessions, saying that Abdur Rahman had orchestrated the attacks.

"Now, we are not conducting the investigation from an anti-Awami
