

'Recover all water bodies to check waterlogging'

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

All the water bodies in and around the city must be recovered from illegal encroachers to eliminate waterlogging problem, experts at a seminar said yesterday.

They also stressed the need for a long-term visionary plan in this regard as Dhaka is gradually becoming unliveable.

The Institute of Diploma Engineers, Bangladesh (IDEB) organised the seminar titled 'Waterlogging in Dhaka

City: Problems and Solutions' at its seminar hall in the city.

IDEB Chairman Shafi Uddin Sarker presented a research article on the problems and solutions to waterlogging in the city, particularly in Dhaka-Narayanganj-Demra (DND) embankment area.

He also demonstrated a geographical condition of the water bodies and canals of Dhaka city and compared their present condition to what they were like 15 years ago.

Shafi Uddin described how the illegal land grabbers and housing developers encroached on different water bodies such as Navy colony-Ibrahimpur-Kalayanpur canal, Gulshan-Banani-Mohakhali lake, Begunbari-Paribagh canal, Dhanmondi lake, Ramna-Segun-bagicha-Arambagh-Gopibagh-Jirani canal and Dholaikhal.

Even different government bodies encroached on the canals and lakes in the name of construction of roads, box culverts and government buildings, he added.

The box culverts, which have been constructed by destroying open canals, are largely responsible for the worsening situation, he said and called for restoration of those canals and eviction of illegal encroachers.

The IDEB chairman also criticised a government decision to make rainwater of Dhanmondi, Lalmatia, Mohammadpur, Sobhanbagh, Kalabagan, Kathalbagan and Razabazar areas drain into the river Balu, 10 miles away from these areas.

Terming the decision suicidal, he suggested that the rainwater should be released to the river Turag, just a mile away from these areas.

To remove waterlogging problem inside DND embankment, the local residents should raise the land up to the level of highway, he said.

LGRD and Cooperatives Minister Abdul Mannan Bhuiyan attended the seminar as the chief guest while Bangladesh Economic Association President Dr Quazi Kholiquzzaman Ahmad presided.

The minister said some canals have already been recovered during a drive recently. The drive will resume after the rainy season, he added.

In some cases, the government bodies have constructed roads and box culverts, encroaching on the canals, he said, adding that these aspects should be looked into.

He also said a committee with representatives from all the government bodies concerned would be formed to solve such problems.

Prof Emazuddin Ahmed, former vice-chancellor of Dhaka University, called for a long-term master plan to save Dhaka from waterlogging and other problems.

Bangladesh Inland Water Transport Corporation Chairman Shamsur Rahman Shimul Biswas said the groundwater table has gone down to 200 feet from 17 feet as most water bodies in and around Dhaka have been filled up.

Dr Kazi Ali Azam, managing director, Dhaka Water and Sewerage Authority (Wasa), and M Enamul Haq, director general, Bangladesh Haor and Jalashay Unnayan Board, also spoke.
