Musical soiree of Dakkhini

Under the spell of the great bard

NOVERA DEEPITA

A musical treat awaited the audience at the National Theatre Stage, Shilpakala Academy on Friday last. Dakkhini Rabindra Sangeetangan, a cultural group, organised a musical soiree featuring eminent Tagore singers Rizwana Chowdhury Bonnya, Tapan Mahmud, Fahim Hossain Chowdhury and Nargis Chowdhury.

Formed in January 7, 1995, the members of Dakkhini Rabindra Sangeetangan are dedicated to promoting Tagore songs. Through the initiative of chairperson Fahim Hossain Chowdhury, the organisation promotes eminent as well as promising artistes of this genre.

Compered by reciter Bhaswar Bandyopadhyay, the opening singer of the show was Nargis Chowdhury. Nargis learned the ABCs of music from Ustad Gajendral Ray. Her other mentors in music are Ajit Ray, Nilufar Yasmeen and Shanjib Dey. A member of Geetanjali, a cultural organisation and Bangladesh Rabindra Sangeet Shilpi Shangstha (BRSS), Nargis Chowdhury is a regular singer of TV, radio and stage. She rendered 'Megh bolechhey jabo jabo, Pathohara tumi, Shudhu jawa aha, Olo shoi and Shokhi bhabonakahareybole.

Next on stage was Fahim, who learned to sing under Pranbandhu Shaha and Selim Majumdar. The co-chairperson of BRSS, he is a popular artiste of Bangladesh Betar, TV channels and stage shows. With his melodious voice he rendered some classic numbers that enthralled the audience. Among the songs he presented were 'Tumi shondhyar meghomala, Amar din phuralo, Shei bhalo shei bhalo, Ami tomar preme, Aji joto tara tobo akashey, Naho mata naho konya, Jiboney amar jato anando and Amar hridoy.

Before the performance of much-awaited artiste of the evening Rizwana Chowdhury Bonnya, Bhaswar Bandyopadhyay recited Tagore's poem 'Ami'.

The recipient of Ananda Sangeet Award twice, Bonnya learned music in Chhayanaut and Bulbul Lalito Kala Academy in her early years. Later she went to Biswabharati for a higher degree in music, where she trained under legendary Tagore exponents Konika Bandyopadhyay, Shailojaranjan Majumdar, Shantideb Ghosh, Nilima Sen and others. She has established a music school 'Shurer Dhara' and also teaches music in Dhaka University.

Dedicating her performance to her mentor, Konika Bandyopadhyay, Bonnya said, "Steered by Chairperson Fahim Hossain Chowdhury, Dakkhini Rabindra Sangeetangan's efforts are commendable." She began with a devotional song, 'Amar hiar majhey lukiyey chhiley. She also rendered 'Emono diney tarey bola jay, Aji tomay and Rupey tomay bholabona'.

The last artiste to perform was Tapan Mahmud, who learned the basics of music under Narayan Chandra Shaha, Fazle Nizami and Arabinda Biswas. He is the recipient of a gold medal in the category of Tagore songs in the then East Pakistan Provincial Music Competition in 1969. Since then he has been performing on TV and radio. In the show he rendered 'Diner sheshey, Shudhu tomar bani, Bhalobeshey shakhi and Jani tomar ajana nahigo'.

The artistically decorated stage and well-organised show of Dakkhini Rabindra Sangeetangan deserves kudos. Here's hoping more such shows would be held often.

A film on Anish Kapoor

The essence of a sculptor

KAVITA CHARANJI

There is a story behind British sculptor Anish Kapoor's gargantuan installation titled 'Marsyas' on display at London's Tate Gallery. Apparently the title was derived from a character of Greek mythology, a satyr flayed by the god Apollo for rendering a more melodious piece of music on the flute. The central message was that artists aren't make a piece of art more beautiful than the gods could make.

In an interview with 'The Guardian', Anish amplified on his 'Marsyas': 'The sculpture is in a sense a flayed object, made of skin stretched, revealing a complex network of interior and exterior.' The work was a vast red PVC membrane stretched between three massive rings.

The artist and his work were the focal point a documentary film screened by the British Council on August 8 at the Council's premises. The film follows the making of 'Marsyas', from the earliest models to its completion in October 2002. Anish comments on the various stages of the process and his philosophy of sculpture. Also included in the film are a range of his other works and two recent large works: 'Sky Mirror' in Nottingham and 'Tarantara', created for the empty shell of Baltic as this new art centre was being built in Gateshead.

The film attracted a wide variety of people--ranging from artists, sculptors, students to teachers and critics. In conversation with some of the viewers, one came across wide appreciation for Anish and his innovative works. In the words of sculptor and artist Professor Hamiduzzaman Khan, "Anish's Marsyas is huge in scale about 155 metres long. Anish says that this is the longest structure ever made. The work has a spiritual element: it is poetic and dramatic because he has taken some sequences from Greek mythology."

Another admirer of Anish's installations is Lala Rukh Selim, sculptor. "I heard that the film would be about contemporary sculpture, so I was interested in seeing it. I wanted to know more about a sculptor's thought process in the course of creating a work of art," she says.

Art critic Moinuddin Khaled, gives his own interpretation of Anish's works. As he says, "Anish tries to make us understand that matter has power. Matter can move us just like colour."

The film on Anish is one in a sequence of documentaries on contemporary British artists. It follows on the heels of a documentary on Barbara Hepworth. Obviously there is an audience for such a film as was in evidence in a lively question-answer session on Anish and his works.

Exhibition

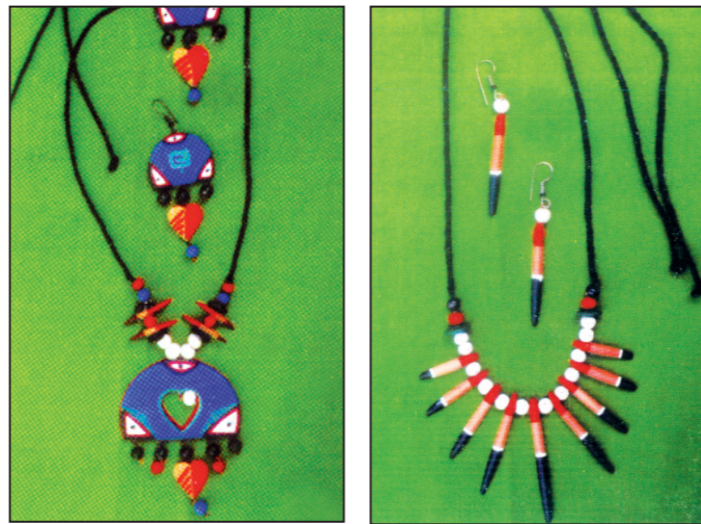

Terra cotta ornaments by Ashik Hasan

CULTURAL CORRESPONDENT

A weeklong exhibition on terra cotta ornaments is on at the Zainul Gallery-2. The first solo exhibition of artist Ashik Hasan, a student of Chittagong Government Art College, the event was inaugurated by eminent artist Abdus Sattar. The special guest of the inaugural programme was Farida Zaman, Director, Institute of Fine Arts, Dhaka University.

Sattar said, "After the establishment of a separate department for pottery, students and artists of this department have done many experimental works. Ashik has come up with the innovative idea of making colourful ornaments out of clay. In his work, one sees the influence of the traditional ornaments worn by indigenous people."

Appreciating Ashik's ideas and artistic application of colours on ornaments, Farida Zaman said, "Clay ornaments are the symbol of our culture. This exhibition displays the bright and colourful ornaments that are much in demand by stylish women. If Ashik had used the natural terra cotta colour, the ornaments would have had an exclusive look. However, I am sure that the exhibition will be successful."

Ashik has been working on the terra cotta ornaments for the last five years. Ashik says, "After many experiments and encouragement from senior artistes, I finally decided to hold an exhibition." With an eye on contemporary taste, Ashik used bright colours and gave uncommon shapes to his ornaments.

Landscapes and geometric forms are seen in Ashik's ornaments. As he says, "I wanted to bring in an element of nature and portray it in my designs. For example, I have imitated the shape of the three-armed net that the fishermen use in rural areas. I have designed some traditional ornaments of different areas. I have made a traditional ornament called 'Lakkhishora' that the potters of Manikganj usually make."

In making the ornaments Ashik has used clay, metal, oil colour and stones. The ornaments were moderately priced. Ashik said, "Like many designers I prefer not to reproduce thousands of copies of an ornament. That is why my ornaments are exclusive."

The exhibition will be open to the public from 10am to 8pm till September 14.

Stars gather for hurricane relief

AP, New York

With the floodwaters of Katrina yet to recede, Randy Newman sang about a long-ago hurricane in Louisiana 1927 to open a benefit programme spread across dozens of television networks Friday last.

The hour-long "Shelter from the Storm" appeal was an echo of a sombre event held four years ago to benefit victims of the September 11 terrorist attack, with the same producer. This time the telethon had more determination than shock and featured native jazz, gospel and swamp-rock sounds.

"Tonight let's show people on the Gulf Coast that they have friends all over the world, friends who care, who understand and are there to give them shelter from the storm," said stand-up comedian Ellen DeGeneres, who was raised in New Orleans.

ABC, CBS, NBC, Fox, UPN and the WB -- the six biggest broadcast networks in US -- aired the programme along with several cable networks. Viewers in nearly 100 countries were able to tune in. Contributions were being solicited for the American Red Cross or the Salvation Army.

It was the most high-profile of several such televised benefits. NBC stations televised an appeal last week, marked by rapper Kanye West's off-script comment that "George Bush doesn't care about black people." The performers largely stuck to scripts during the "Shelter from the Storm" appeal Friday, including West, who sang 'Jesus Walks' with a gospel choir.

"We've all heard the question," actor/comedian Chris Rock said. "Why didn't these people just leave when they had the chance? But now we realise that not everybody can just jump into their SUVs and drive to a nice hotel. These people depend on public transportation, and these people can't afford a nice hotel, because some of them work there. Now it's your chance to help them."

Rock singer John Fogerty, who sang passionately about the Mississippi Delta a generation ago, wasn't there but his music was: the Foo Fighters sang 'Born on the Bayou' and Garth Brooks did 'Who'll Stop the Rain'.

Mariah Carey and Neil Young were also backed by gospel singers and Alicia Keys was joined by several gospel stars. U2 needed only one powerful voice, singer Mary J Blige's, to enliven the rock band's anthem 'One'. Keys sang her hit 'If I Ain't Got You', and Patti LaBelle sang the Pretenders' song 'I'll Stand By You'.
