

A model displays jewellery that will be worn by celebrities at the 78th Academy Awards at a presentation at House of Harry Winston jewellery in Beverly Hills. Celebrities that are nominated as well as presenters and special clients are allowed to pick up jewels from the store that are lent to them for the ceremony. For some of the most expensive pieces, a guard hired by the store will stay with the celebrity during the duration of the event.

Japan's Keio University postgraduate student Yusuke Wada displays a prototype model of the world's first electrical kaleidoscope "moo-pong", which shows a maximum of six digital video images, at a conference of interaction in Tokyo. The moo-pong balls have an RFID chip and information video images which has a special optical unit which can connect with a PC to read RFID and play recorded images like a kaleidoscope.

Bayern Munich's CEO Karl-Heinz Rummenigge poses with Germany WC-2006 mascot Conmebol before his press conference of presentation of the artistic and cultural programme of the Federal Government for the 2006 FIFA World Cup, in cooperation with the 2006 FIFA World Cup Organising Committee, at Palazzo Marino in downtown Milan. AFP PHOTO