Women clearly ahead

The cover story on "Reporting Women" is really very interesting and gives us some food for thought. Though this was on women journalists who are working in their own world with flying colours, a different representation as well as the inspiring words give some extra spirit. Even in the days of such great technological advancement, the women of our country are still deprived. But this must not continue for long.

I want to thank the writers to for their excellent contribution. I hope SWM will do more of such interesting cover stories. Perhaps you could consider doing stories on personalities in the field of engineering, medicine, banking and so on.

Hats off to modern science

It is always great to be in the modern world full of wonders and scientific successes. Unlike the days of my grandparents' we now have to suffer very little to do an uphill task thanks to the computerised technology. The organisations, offices, banks, schools, colleges, universities and others are now extensively depending on computers. Children at the age of two or three are now learning their basic lessons through CDs and DVDs. It is always nice to see the exploitation of modern technology in the education sector and giving educating children in an interesting way.

Sensational Himesh Reshammiya

Himesh Reshammiya as a music composer and a singer is topping music charts one after another. Even though he is famous for music direction and composition, his singing talent came into limelight in 2005 with his Sufi song track 'Aashiq Banaya Aapne' which eventually dominated every party and gathering. In 2006 his compositions in 'Aksar' rocked every music lover and now his debut album 'Aap Kaa Surroor' has also turned out to be superhit. He has become the most sought after music director of the time and his hands are already full with thirty-five films at the moment.

He is the only singer who has made a hattrick appearance in the music video of three films--Aashiq Banaya Aapne, Aksar, Tom, Dick And Harry. Looks like the formula to a successful film is now equal to Himesh! Here's wishing Himesh all the best and hope he keeps on rocking the world in the years to come.
