12th Asian Art Biennale

The end of a successful exhibition

ERSHAD KAMOL

INAUGURATED on March 5, the 12th Asian Art Biennale, one of the most popular biennales in Asia, ended successfully on March 31. 532 artworks by 348 artists of 33 countries, including Bangladesh exhibited and competed in different art forms such as paintings, sculpture, etching, mixed media, installation, calligraphy and others at three galleries -- National Art Gallery in Bangladesh Shilpakala Academy, Osmani Auditorium and National Museum.

Five jury members -- Wu Xiao Jiang from China, Iromie Wijewardena from Sri Lanka, Le Thong from Vietnam, and Sadek Khan and Syed Jahangir from Bangladesh -- selected the three Grand Prize winners and eight Honourable Mention Awards.

Like other popular international biennales, modern and technically rich art works such as installation and mixed media were predominant in the competition. Of the three Grand Prizes, two went to Dhali Al Mamoon of Bangladesh and Hiroshi Fuji of Japan for installation. Sedahat Jabbari of Iran won the other prize for his mixed media work, which is a modern perspective of calligraphy. Mrinal Haque and Tejsh Haldar of Bangladesh, Maria Kristina Ulas of Estonia, Jagath Ravindra of Sri Lanka, Salman Al Malik of Qatar, Hilda Hyari of Jordan, Egidius Rudinkas of Lithuania and Rashid Abdur Rahman of Oman won the Honourable Mention Awards for their modern approach both in terms of theme and presentation as well as use of matter.

A five-member selection committee-- Murtaja Baseer, Abu

A viewer closely observes a life-size sculpture at the exhibition

Taher, Alok Roy, Moinuddin Khalid and Hamiduzzaman Khan-- selected 174 art works of the 134 Bangladeshi artists from 1500 works by the 600 artists. ABM Salahuddin, director of Department of Fine Arts of Bangladesh Shilpakala Academy, claimed that this year's selection was unbiased. Moreover, 20 invited Bangladeshi senior artists exhibited one art work each at the biennale, he said.

Murtaja Baseer, a member of the selection committee said, "I sought a transparent selection process. Personally I'm not an admirer of installations, as the art form is not suitable for our socio-economic condition. However, in all the prestigious international biennales like Venice Biennale and others, the organisers always prefer to include art forms such as multi-media, photography and installation. Even the foreign jury members of the Asian Art Biennale prefer the technically rich art forms for the awards. It is a fact that Bangladeshi artists are doing quality installation. I suggested the inclusion of this art form in the Asian Art Biennale, so that the Bangladeshi artists can compete for the prizes."

Besides, a competition and exhibition, a two-day seminar was held at the Experimental Hall, BSA. Najma Khan Majlish and Syed

Manzoorul Islam were the keynote speakers at the seminar titled "Gender Perspective in the Asian Art". Talking about the seminar, Baseer said, "The topic of the seminar was interesting and new. However, none of the speakers properly evaluated the topic. They have mixed up 'gender perspective' with the 'women's issue' and basically analysed from feminist point of view. However, male and female both are the part of gender perspective."

Local and foreign art experts are full of praise for the biennale. Foreign artists confessed to surprise at viewing such a huge event in Bangladesh. On overall arrangement Murtaja Baseer said, "I believe the Asian Art Biennale is a positive step in the development of art in Bangladesh. If we analyse and compare the development before and after the introduction of the biennale in 1981, we see that the Bangladeshi art has displayed dynamic development during the last two decades. The biennale has given a scope to indigenous artists to view the art works of foreign artists and thereby enrich their minds and work. I believe that young Bangladeshi artists are doing better than those of other South Asian countries. In this sense BSA is doing a great job."

Successful organiser ABM Salahuddin said, "The function was a fall out of the BSA's hard work. There should be a separate cell under the Fine Arts Department of BSA to organise the biennale."

Salahuddin has ambitious plans for the next biennale. He said, "The next biennale will include digital photography."

Parul Konya: A tale of oppression

CULTURAL CORRESPONDENT

The telefilm Parul Konya is a saga of oppression. The victims are a girl named Parul and her husband Kodom who works in Sardar Bari. One day Kodom has an accident while working in the field and suffers a leg injury. The sardar (the village head) pays no heed to the plight of Kodom. However, the sardar's son, a university student, comes forward to help Kodom --but it is too late. The distraught Parul holds the sardar responsible for her husband's death. In disgust she leaves the sardar's house even though she has nowhere to go.

The main actors in Parul Konya are Pijush Bandyopadhyay, Azizul Hakim and Tania. The director is S A Haque Alik. The playwright is Emdadul Haque Milton. The telefilm will be aired soon on Channel 1.

Tania plays the lead role in Parul Konya

A scene from Kisher Badya Baj Go, performed by Amader Theatre marking a week-long street drama festival recently at the local Town Hall premises in Mymensingh.

Unconventional installations by two artists

FAYZA HAQ

Jessica Rost, a visiting artist from UK, had her recent installation exhibition at the Goethe Institut. Talking about her impression of the country, she says, "From the beginning of my stay, I was interested in finding out what the real Bangladesh was about. With so much recent history and problems still raging, I wanted to know where the people had come from, their story. I was at first disappointed to find that many of the ancient buildings are uncared for. I soon realised that the identity of Bangladesh is kept close to the people through personal experiences, stories, songs and music. It is not something which can be defined through architecture and museum objects."

Among the many items of the installation was the Cockroach girl, made from calico fabric put together with latex glue. When Jessica came she wasn't used to cockroaches but after two months here she says she lives in harmony with them. "I realise now that they are just harmless creatures," she says. "It is related to other work that show that women are helpless. That's why I've depicted the insect as being on its back. I found that there are many women who spend their time mostly in the kitchen. They work very hard but they're not valued and don't have as much freedom as the men."

News at 10 -- puppet show performance

Another entry depicted two green chillies. "I'm not used to chillies and biting into them is like biting into snakes for me," Jessica says. Behind it, a non-sense poem Bapu Ram Shapu Ray was inscribed. The poem is about pretending to have courage. It was framed in boxes for sending toiletries in Bangladeshi weddings.

Then we came across a mosquito motorbike related to the film that she showed during the programme. From the beginning of her stay here she focused on the mosquito, as it was a symbol for her. It stood for corruption and frustration. The mosquito net symbolised protection for the people. She felt that conniving and powerful people were sucking the strength and energy of the helpless masses. Jessica was also amazed by the folk art and so she depicted rickshaw-walla shoes, beautifully decorated ones with designs for those who had none. "Rickshaw art is not valued as much as established art," she commented. There was also a gauze butterfly in purple standing for the dreams and aspirations of the people of Bangladesh.

There was an installation with numerous gaudily coloured mosquitoes around a giant white mosquito net in the tea-terrace. The mosquitoes were hanging upside down and were trapped. About her short film, Blue mosquito, Jessica says, "The film is about the feelings that I experienced under the surface of everyday life here; the struggle to be free, the search for the unattainable."

Kabir Ahmed Masum Chisty's News at 10 puppet show performance presented news in the form of a puppet play. The puppets have no speech and they reflect the vision of the director. In the background of the puppet show is a painted audience who watch the play unfold.

Paris Hilton considered for Mother Teresa role

Reports indicate that Indian director T Rajeevnanth will be recruiting Paris Hilton to play the starring role in a Mother Teresa biopic.

This is just taking the idea of stunt-casting to a whole new level. British web site Life Style Extra reports that Rajeevnanth's people have reportedly been in contact with Hilton's camp to set up a meeting when Rajeevnanth arrives in the States. According to Life Style Extra, Rajeevnanth will be bringing along various photos of Hilton that have been altered to make her appear more like Mother Teresa. Rajeevnanth said, "Paris has expressed delight that I have short-listed her to play the role."

Rajeevnanth hopes to begin shooting his Mother Teresa film early next year. Hilton has been seen in several movie roles over the last few years, including gigs in The Cat in the Hat and the horror film House of Wax, which won her this year's Razzie Award for Worst Supporting Actress. She's better known, however, for her work on the Fox reality show The Simple Life and for 1 Night in Paris.
