Sevilla thrashed Middlesbrough 4-0 to win the UEFA Cup on Wednesday, kickstarting a Spanish fiesta in the Philips Stadium after the largest victory since the competition went to a one-match final.

The Andalusians turned their first European final into a procession. Leading at halftime through Luis Fabiano's 26th, minute header, they added three goals after the break to deflate the English side playing their last game under coach Steve McClaren, who is leaving to become England coach.

Italian Enzo Maresca scored twice in a six-minute spell with substitute Frederic Kanoute rubbing salt in Boro's wounds with a fourth a minute from time to hand Sevilla their first trophy since a domestic cup win in 1948 and the perfect way to celebrate their centenary season.

Sevilla are the third Spanish side to win the UEFA Cup following triumphs for Real Madrid (1985 and 1986) and Valencia (2004).

"It worked out perfectly and we achieved our aim of winning the trophy in the year of our centenary," Pep Marti told Spanish TV. "For the fans and at least half of the city of Seville this will be a great day of celebration."

McClaren could not inspire another comeback reminiscent of Boro's rollercoaster ride to the final as the English side failed to spark in their first appearance at such a level.

Not even the halftime introduction of Italian striker Massimo Maccarone, hero from the astonishing four-goal comeback victories in the quarter and semifinal victories could lift a side playing their 64th game of a long and demanding season.

"We could have played better but credit to them they were a class side and deserved it," Boro captain Gareth Southgate told ITV.

In a bright opening Brazilian rightback Daniel sent a shot fizzing past Mark Schwarzer's far post early on.

It was Sevilla who settled the better, Adriano and Luis Fabiano giving Boro some early scares. In quick succession they were allowed to get in crosses from the byline requiring last-ditch clearances as Javier Saviola lurked.

The Argentine, who has flourished at Sevilla during a season-long loan from Barcelona, was then allowed too much time on the edge of the box to fire a well-struck shot which cannoned into Gareth Southgate.

Sevilla were rewarded for their early dominance with the opening goal on 26 minutes. Daniel planted a perfect cross on to the head of Fabiano who gave Schwarzer, wearing a protective mask after fracturing a cheekbone less than three weeks ago, no chance with a well placed downward header into the corner.

With Boro rattled, Adriano then ran at the heart of the retreating defence and thumped his shot over the bar.

Sevilla replaced Saviola with Kanoute at halftime and the Spaniards threatened again soon after the restart with Adriano curling wide after a swift move.

Boro responded with their best chance of the match as Mark Viduka, taking Chris Riggott's knock down on the volley, drew a superb block from an Andres Palop from point blank range.

Maccarone forced Palop to tip over and angled drive and Hasselbaink sent a free-kick whistling narrowly over.

Sensing a change in momentum, McClaren threw on a fourth striker with Nigerian Yakubu Aiyegbeni replacing defender

Viduka, at last escaping Julien Escude's shackles, blazed wide and was denied a penalty in Boro's next attack when he was sent crunching to the ground by Sevilla captain Javi Navarro.

Making most of a lenient decision by referee Herbert Fandel Sevilla wrapped up the game after 78 minutes when Maresca slotting in after Schwarzer could only parry Kanoute's shot from a Jesus Navas cross.

Maresca added a third six minutes later with a left foot shot from the edge of the box and Kanoute pounced at the death to notch a fourth.

"We have achieved something very important," Marseca told Spanish TV. "It was a perfect day. I think we deserve it and so do the fans. It is important that they enjoy this moment."

"There was a lot of tension and a lot of pressure, but the suffering was all worth it to bring some joy to our fans," said coach Juande Ramos.

Viduka said: "If I'd put that chance away it could have been a different story at 1-1.

"I thought we could go all the way tonight, the way we played in the last two games, but today it just wasn't meant to be.

Magath sees life after Ballack

AFP, Munich

Bayern Munich manager Felix Magath believes Michael Ballack's summer transfer to English champions Chelsea could actually help his team to play better football next season.

German international captain Ballack seems certain to move to Chelsea in one of the worst kept secrets of the summer and Magath believes it will force his team to be less reliant on providing crosses to feed Ballack's aerial threat.

"I had two great years with him and wish him all the best at Chelsea," Magath said in an interview with Bild daily.

"But I have to say I am looking forward to a Bayern without Ballack. It is a challenge to form a team without him.

"Michael's departure will have consequences. His aerial ability will be gone but I think we can now fulfil more of our potential.

"We will play more on the ground. Next season the fans should see more attractive football."

Despite winning a league and cup double Bayern have been accused of playing dour football at times this season and are set for a busy summer in the transfer market.

"We have a good team at the moment that harbours international ambitions. We can replace Michael Ballack and there could be two or three new players arriving," revealed Magath.

Bayern have already had a six million euro bid for Schalke's Brazilian playmaker Lincoln turned down but are set to sign German international attacker Lukas Podolski from FC Cologne for a similar fee.

The German champions have also registered their interest in SV Hamburg's Belgian international defender Daniel van Buyten.

Spurs' request turned down

AP, London

The Premier League turned down Tottenham's request that its season-ending loss to West Ham to be replayed because of a suspected food-poisoning outbreak that affected 10 of its players.

Sunday's 2-1 loss let Arsenal -- which beat Wigan 4-2 -- overtake Tottenham for fourth place and clinch a spot in the Champions League qualifying rounds.

The players became ill hours before the game, and the club asked Premier League officials for a postponement shortly before kick-off. The league would only sanction a four-hour delay and the game went ahead on time with several players clearly sick.

Faced with a place in the less prestigious UEFA Cup rather than the more lucrative Champions League, Tottenham chairman Daniel Levy wrote an open letter to the Premier League to ask for a replay.

After a meeting in central London on Wednesday, Premier League board members sent a written response to Tottenham saying they "find no grounds for acceding to your request for a replay."

After the hearing, Levy declined to comment on what, if any, action Tottenham would now take.

"The Premier League will be sending out a letter, we will have a meeting with our board and decide what our next course of action is," he said. "Let's wait and see what happens."

Pearce wields the axe

REUTERS, London

Manchester City manager Stuart Pearce announced a clearout of 10 players including several major international signings on Thursday.

The released men, including French defender David Sommeil, a 3.4 million pound (6.35 million dollars) signing from Girondins Bordeaux in 2003, were told their contracts are not to be renewed.

Pearce's plans were confirmed by the club website which reported that he met each player individually earlier this week to explain his decisions.

The departing men also include on-loan Dutch forward Kiki Musampa, from Atletico Madrid, and Spanish midfielder Albert Riera, from Espanyol.

Pearce has also released Dutch reserve goalkeeper Geert de Vlieger, Danish defender Mikkel Bischoff and Finnish midfielder Tuomas Haapala.

He said last week that he was looking to recruit "four top-line players" and bolster his squad in other ways. This may mean promoting some of the promising youngsters who helped City reach the FA Youth Cup final.

City finished 15th in the Premier League.

Ronaldo happy at Madrid

REUTERS, Madrid

Brazil striker Ronaldo looked to rebuild bridges with Real Madrid on Wednesday when he said he would be happy to stay at the Primera Liga club.

"At the moment there is a lot of uncertainty surrounding the club after a difficult year," Ronaldo told a news conference.

"But I have a contract with Real (until 2008) so when I return from (next month's) World Cup, if the new president wants me I would be delighted to stay."

The striker appeared to be on his way out in February when, after being whistled by a section of fans, he said he would consider his future at the end of the season.

Florentino Perez then quit as club president to be replaced by Fernando Martin, who in turn was ousted by the board last month.

A presidential election is due to be held at the end of the season although the result is not expected to be known until early July. Ronaldo's attitude to the Real supporters remains cautious.

"I am happy in Madrid and want to be successful here but if the fans don't want me I don't want to be a problem for them," he said.

RONALDO

"Many times the responsibility if things go wrong seems to fall on one or two players, and one bad event affects the atmosphere and the team's performance."

"I hope things are put right soon so that everyone can be a little calmer and we can all look forward to a great season next year."

Real are coming to the end of their third successive season without a major trophy, their worst run for more than 50 years.

Ronaldo is likely to miss Real's last game of the season against Sevilla on Tuesday because of injury but is looking ahead to the World Cup in Germany in positive mood.

"It has been a difficult year for me with injuries but I have got over them and the important thing now is to prepare properly for the World Cup," he said.

"I am not aiming to be the top scorer, I just want to win the Cup and if I can score three or more goals I will be happy."

Ronaldo joined Real from Inter Milan in 2002 for 35 million euros (41.79 million dollars).

Spain eye Euro double

REUTERS, Madrid

Spain have their eyes on winning both of Europe's top club competitions after Sevilla crushed Middlesbrough 4-0 in the UEFA Cup final.

With Barcelona taking on Arsenal in the Champions League final in Paris on May 17, Spain could achieve a fourth European double after Sevilla's victory in Einhoven on Wednesday.

"Sevilla, their fans and Spanish football deserve this victory. Now is the moment to complete a double in European competitions," Spain's sports minister Jaime Lissavetzky told reporters.

Spanish clubs previously did a double in 1958, 1960 and 1966 when the UEFA Cup was known as the Inter-Cities Fairs Cup. In each of those three years, Real Madrid won the European Cup and Barcelona lifted the old Fairs Cup.

Already assured of a UEFA Cup place next season, Sevilla, who are celebrating their centenary, can still qualify for the Champions League through the Primera Liga.

They are three points behind fourth-placed Osasuna with a game in hand and take on champions Barcelona on Saturday before playing their final game at home to Real Madrid next Tuesday.

Left back David Castedo said: "The team rose to the challenge in the important moments of the game and maintained the concentration needed in a game like this, from the start."

Maresca 'snubs' Italy call

INTERNET, undated

Enzo Maresca has dodged any questions of a possible World Cup call-up after leading Sevilla to UEFA Cup victory on Wednesday night.

The Italian was the Spaniard's star man in Holland on Wednesday as his brace helped his side demolish Middlesbrough 4-0.

That performance gave credibility to those who believe that Italy boss Marcello Lippi should select him for Germany 2006, but the midfielder just wanted to bask in his glory.

"The World Cup is not on my mind," stated the former Under-21 international, who has never won full honours.

"I just want to enjoy the moment. Sevilla have always believed in me and trusted in me, and it is only right to enjoy this with the team."

The 26-year-old joined the Liga outfit last summer after he finally brought his Juventus career to an end after spending previous seasons on loan at clubs such as Piacenza, Bologna and Fiorentina.

He's instantly settled with Sevilla and his eight goals in 28 games have made him his club's top scorer.

"It is very difficult to explain what happened tonight," he said after his outfit's convincing win at the PSV Stadion.

"It is virtually impossible to imagine. We won the Cup and I scored twice. It is the best day of my life. As you can imagine, I'm really happy."

also wanted to thank the travelling Sevilla public whom he sent into delirium as his strikes made the game safe.

"We are very grateful to the fans for coming all this way with us," he continued. "They have been very important for us."

L'pool to replace stolen tickets

AFP, London

Liverpool have agreed to replace around 1,000 FA Cup final tickets that were stolen last week after Millennium Stadium officials refused to issue replacements on security grounds.

Liverpool will replace the tickets from a stock that were to be released after a ballot of members of the club's fan card scheme.

Chief executive Rick Parry said: "We are confident the vast majority of supporters affected will be offered replacement tickets for the final."

"Obviously, those supporters who had applied for inclusion in the ballot will be disappointed, but we feel this is the best way to deal with a very difficult situation."

The missing tickets were stolen in a raid on a Royal Mail van.

Liverpool will face West Ham in Saturday's FA Cup final in Cardiff.

UEFA wins court battle

AP, London

European soccer's governing body won a court case against Web site operators who illegally pirated highlights of Champions League matches for broadcast on the Internet.

In upholding UEFA's claim of copyright infringement, the High Court in London issued an injunction preventing the use of match footage except on authorized Web sites.

The court also ordered the confiscation of all equipment used by the pirate operators and ordered them to pay "substantial costs," UEFA said in a statement Thursday.

The amount of damages has yet to be decided.

Kewell out to make amends

REUTERS, Liverpool

Liverpool's Harry Kewell hopes Saturday's FA Cup final helps erase the personal disappointment he suffered when they won the Champions League 12 months ago.

Kewell helped Liverpool reach the European Cup final but played for just 23 minutes of their memorable penalty shoot-out victory over AC Milan in Istanbul because of a groin injury.

"When you look at it and considering what happened in Istanbul this is really going to be my first final and I just hope that everything goes well," said the Australia forward.

"I just want to be a big part of it," the 27-year-old told reporters ahead of the match against east London team West Ham United at Cardiff's Millennium Stadium.

"Even now people still remind me of what happened in the Champions League final. It's one of those things, but you have to forget about the past and turn the corner."

"Even though it was still a lovely moment to be part of, in terms of the club winning the Champions League, on a personal note it wasn't that good," he added.

"But we have this really big game coming up at the weekend against West Ham and it gives me the chance to make my own personal milestone by playing in a final."

Surgery last summer delayed Kewell's return to first-team action until October. He has since enjoyed his best form as a Liverpool player since signing from Leeds United in July, 2003.

Kewell, who is in Australia's squad for this year's World Cup finals, helped Liverpool finish third in the Premier League and reach their first FA Cup final for five years.

"There was never any doubt in my mind that I would get another chance to play in a cup final with Liverpool."

"The club is always moving forward and when you play at a big club like Liverpool you know that you have to get to cup finals."

Another Italian official quits

REUTERS, Milan

Italian Football Federation vice-president Innocenzo Mazzini has resigned as the scandal surrounding published telephone conversations continues to make waves through the game.

A conversation between Mazzini and Juventus general manager Luciano Moggi, who is at the centre of the affair, was among those published in Italian newspapers last week.

In the conversation with Moggi, Mazzini made insulting references to Football Federation president Franco Carraro, who himself resigned on Monday, and also discussed which Juventus delegate would be attending a meeting on refereeing appointments. Mazzini has not been put under investigation by any of the probes now looking into Italian football and the role of Moggi in the game.

In a resignation letter distributed by the Federation, Mazzini said that he felt "extreme discomfort" and the need to resign in order to "put aside any misunderstandings".

The Federation is being led by Giancarlo Abete ahead of a federal council meeting on Tuesday which is set to discuss Carraro's resignation.

On Wednesday, Juventus CEO Antonio Giraudo was put under investigation for false accounting.

Judicial sources in Turin said that a magistrates' investigation into Giraudo, related to Juve's transfer dealings, had been underway for some time.

Juventus are already under the spotlight of two magistrates' investigations looking into Moggi's business operations. He is being investigated by magistrates in Naples and Rome in probes into football gambling and the operation of a management company owned by his son Alessandro.

The GEA management firm has nearly 200 players and coaches on its books and Rome magistrates have put them under investigation for "illegal competition with use of threats and violence".

Juventus, whose owners have declined to give any public backing to Moggi and Giraudo, were due to hold a board meeting later on Thursday.
