

ATTAINMENT OF MDGS
'Bring people with disability to mainstream of dev'

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

People with disability must be brought to the mainstream of development to attain the country's millennium development goals (MDGs), said the speakers at a consultation meting in the city yesterday.

They also suggested inclusion of nutrition-related issues in textbook curriculums at primary and secondary levels to create awareness about malnutrition leading to disability.

The consultation meting was organised by National Forum of Organisations Working with the Disabled (NFOWD) in collaboration with ActionAid Bangladesh and Manusher Jonno at LGED Bhaban in Agargaon.

The meeting was held in advance of the regional mid-point review of the implementation of the Biwako Millennium Framework for Action towards an Inclusive, Barrier-free and Rights-based Society for Persons with Disabilities in Asia and the Pacific (BMF) at a high-level intergovernmental meeting to be held in 2007.

"To achieve the goal of the BMF, seven priority areas, 18 targets and 15 strategies have been identified. Bangladesh has been actively involved in the initiation process and the mid-point review of the BMF," said Theima Kay, director of emerging social issues division of Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific (Escap) while speaking at the opening session of the workshop.

"The distress condition of the people with disability will not change until they are brought to the mainstream of the development," said Social Welfare Minister Ali Ahsan Mohammad Mojaheed while speaking as chief guest.

He said the government has decided to reserve 10 percent government jobs and two seats in every passenger bus for people with disability.

Khandaker Zahurul Alam, president of NFOWD, said many factors including violence, road accidents, natural calamities and malnutrition are pushing up the number of handicapped people in the country.

He said if given proper social assistance, people with disability could contribute significantly to the wellbeing of the country.

AHM Noman Khan, secretary general of NFOWD, said women with disability are subjected to more discrimination than men.

"Challenged women are more neglected in society and family than their male counterparts and rural women with disability are passing their lives in miserable conditions," he added.

The participants said country's development is not possible ignoring a huge number of challenged people.

They estimated that 1.40 crore or 10 percent of the population are challenged and among them 70 lakh are women.

The speakers laid emphasis on community-based approach for preventing the causes of disability, reaching out to persons with disabilities in rural areas and raising awareness and advocacy for the inclusion of persons with disabilities in all social, cultural and religious activities.

They also stressed the need for disseminating the knowledge of nutrition as many people have become disabled due to malnutrition.

Representatives from different ministries and directorates and people with disabilities also took part in the workshop.

Shibir postpones showdown as activists refuse to join rally

RU CORRESPONDENT

Rajshahi University (RU) Islami Chhatra Shibir yesterday postponed its scheduled showdown on the campus with its President Mahbubul Alam Salehi, a key suspect in Prof S Taher Ahmed murder case, as many activists refused to join the rally apart from huge police presence.

A few Shibir activists gathered near the administrative building and waited for the rally from the morning, but it was deferred before noon.

"Many of our workers refused to attend the rally because of Salehi's presence," said a party insider.

"His suspected involvement in the murder of Prof Taher has already damaged the party's image. If we carry on further with him people will abuse us," he said seeking anonymity.

"We postponed the programme as Salehi is busy in preparing for examinations," RU Shibir Secretary Nur Muhammad Mondol told The Daily Star.

However, tension gripped the students as Salehi visited both male and female dormitories and exchanged greetings with them.

He returned to the campus on Tuesday after he was freed on bail from the High Court.

A huge number of police were deployed on the campus as the authorities apprehended violence following Salehi's return.

Rajshahi Metropolitan Police Commissioner Muhammad Javed Patwary along with senior officials visited the campus.

Meanwhile, RU Chhatra Sangram Parishad, a combine of different student organisations led by Bangladesh Chhatra League, has staged angry protests.

Wearing shrouds on heads, they paraded campus thoroughfares and held a rally beside the central library.

They also threatened tougher agitation and suspension of all academic activities if Salehi sits for examination.

VIOLENCE AGAINST WOMEN ON RISE
200 women fall victim to violence last month

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

The women rights organisations expressed concern over the increasing rate of violence against women in the country.

Bangladesh National Women Lawyers Association (BNWLA) in a press release yesterday presented an analysis of the news reports, which show that a total of 200 women fell victim to violence only in the last month.

The report also shows that rape and dowry remain the most prevailing forms of violence against women.

Meanwhile, speakers at a press conference yesterday said a total of 169 women were victims of violence last year at several places in the capital according to the records in Khilgaon and Sabujbagh police stations.

Nari Maitree organised the press conference titled 'Creating awareness to stop violence against women' as part of its project 'We, only, can stop all sorts of violence against women' at the National Press Club in the city.

Presenting a written statement, Shahin Akter Doli, executive director of Nari Maitree said, "Most of us are not aware of the fact that women rights are part of human rights."

As a result, women fall victim to violence regularly in the spheres of family, society and state, she added.

Doli pointed out domestic violence as special form violence against women as women are oppressed at home both physically and mentally.

Speakers also identified the lack of rule of law as a major obstacle to stop violence against women.

They suggested that the condition be changed through creating awareness among people at all levels.

The male members of every family may play a significant role to change the condition, they said.

According to a report of Ain O Shalish Kendra, a total of 356 women were victims of violence for dowry last year across the country while only 134 cases were filed against the dowry violence, they said at the press conference.

Advocate Salma Ali, executive director of BNWLA, told The Daily Star over phone that the cases of violence on women cannot be carried out successfully for absence of 'Victim Witness Protection Act'.

For poverty, gender biased shalish system at the grassroots level and fear of losing dignity in the society, women often seem to be reluctant to take legal action, she added.

The government will undertake necessary measures to increase productions in state-run sugar mills and fertiliser factories through their modernisation and renovation.

Industries Minister Motiur Rahman Nazami also attended the meeting.

Secretaries and senior officials of the ministries concerned were Saifur Rahman said the state-run sugar mills have a huge potentiality in this changing situation of the global sugar market.

"Most of the state-run sugar mills and fertiliser factories become dilapidated because they were not properly run during the last several years, but now we are finalising a plan of modernising and renovating these mills to meet the demand of the country," he said.

the global sugar and fertiliser market has created a huge prospect for the state-run mills and factories, and the government is ready to provide all supports, including financial ones, to them to utilize the potentiality.

Asset worth Tk 6000 crore generated in 15 years thru' social afforestation

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Only through social afforestation, asset worth Tk 6000 crore has been generated during the last 15 years in the country, said Environment and Forest Minister Tariqul Islam yesterday.

He also said country's 56 thousand partners of social forestation, who look after the trees, have got a total amount of Tk 86 crore only in last year.

The minister was speaking in the concluding ceremony of a month-long National Tree Fair-2006 at the National Parade Ground in the city.

Nine government and semi-government organisations, eleven NGOs and a number of private enterprises took part in the fair with 143 stalls.

This year, around 24 lakh seedlings of 1500 species, worth around Tk 3.64 crore were sold in the fair.

Addressing the ceremony as chief guest, the minister also said nationwide tree plantation programme in the country has largely contributed to poverty alleviation, employment generation and sustainable development in the country.

Forestation along the highways, railways and dams cost little but bring immense benefits to the poor and destitute, he added.

Deputy Minister for Environment and Forest Jafurul Islam Chowdhury said sixteen coastal districts of the country are under the threat of submerging in the sea due to global warming. Only massive plantation programme in the country can avoid the catastrophe, he added.

Secretary to the Ministry for Environment and Forest Jafar Ahmed Chowdhury said Vietnam and Korean model of 'artificial and continuous forestation' would serve double purpose: it will maintain the environmental equilibrium and attract tourists.

With a view to encouraging the young generation in tree plantation, the forest department organised painting and essay competitions where 19 students in different categories were awarded with crest and certificates.

Seven stalls were awarded with crests and certificates in three categories.
