Education files pile up as CA pressed for time

Teachers urge handing over charge to another adviser

SURAJNATH DEABNATH

The country's education sector is stagnating as President and Chief Adviser to the Caretaker Government Iajuddin Ahmed, also in charge of the education ministry, is too busy dealing with the political crisis and the running of 10 other ministries.

Several thousand files from the education ministry have piled up at Bangabhaban as the President has no time to sign them, education ministry sources said.

One month after the caretaker government took over, Chief Adviser Iajuddin Ahmed and Education Secretary Mamtazul Islam are yet to initiate measures to solve pressing issues, the sources added.

Teachers, officials of government bodies related to education and the staff of the education ministry feel that charge of the education ministry should be handed over to another adviser of the caretaker government until the next government takes office after the general elections.

"The education minister or chief of the education ministry usually has to sign around 100 to 150 documents and look at 200 to 250 files daily, but at this moment officials of the ministry cannot carry out the daily routine works as the education chief is not available," an education ministry official said.

The situation has become acute as Education Secretary Mamtazul Islam is not attending his office due to illness. Before this, he was not available due to a tour of Vietnam from November 16 to 24, ministry sources said.

"With the huge responsibilities of 11 ministries, President Iajuddin has become overburdened. He cannot do his duties properly in any ministry. Now he should handover the education ministry to another adviser of the caretaker government as the chief adviser has to deal with a lot of other problems," said Prof Quazi Farroque, chief coordinator and convener of the National Front of Teachers and Employees (NFTE), a platform of 11 organisations of teachers and employees.

Some serious problems have already been created which need to be solved immediately. These include the failure to resolve the conflict around a circular published on October 31 that awarded teachers of non-government educational institutions 100 per cent basic salary from government coffers.

The circular also placed the condition that tuition fees collected from students be deposited in government funds.

Teachers under three platforms have held rallies, brought out processions and submitted memorandums to the chief adviser demanding cancellation of the circular.

Bangladesh Shikkhak Karmachari Oikya Parishad, a platform of eight organisations of teachers and employees, said the

CTG CONTAINER TERMINAL Operations resume after 17-day stalemate

STAFF CORRESPONDENT, Ctg

Ending a 17-day stalemate, container handling with sophisticated gantry cranes resumed at Chittagong Container Terminal (CCT) from 8:00pm yesterday after Chittagong Port Authority (CPA) had accepted an alternative proposal from City Mayor ABM Mohiuddin Chowdhury.

Dockworkers led by Mayor ABM Mohiuddin Chowdhury have been demanding immediate cancellation of the agreement with a private company Saif Powertec Ltd, for operating the four cranes.

The Chittagong Port Authority (CPA) decided to operate the gantry cranes by its own operators temporarily instead of the private company. CPA's own operators and dockworkers have joined the work resuming operations at CCT. Operations at CCT came to a halt since November 12 as dockworkers, loyal to the city mayor refrained from their work, demanding cancellation of an agreement for the gantry cranes to be operated by Saif Powertec.

Earlier in the day, hundreds of dockworkers led by Mayor Mohiuddin Chowdhury laid siege to Bandar Bhaban, the headquarters of CPA, where the mayor placed a demand to the authorities to engage CPA's own operators to the task of operating the gantry cranes for at least 10 days to examine their skill.

Pakistan tests nuke-capable missile

AFP, Islamabad

Pakistan test launched a nuclear-capable medium range missile on Wednesday, two days after South Asian rival India conducted its first trial of a new ballistic intercept system.

The Pakistani Haft 4 or Shaheen-1 missile -- Shaheen means "eagle" in Urdu -- has a range of 700 kilometres (437 miles) meaning it can hit targets deep inside neighbouring India.

Pakistani troops today conducted a successful launch of the medium range Haft 4 or Shaheen-1 missile, the military said in a statement.

The test came as part of a continuing exercise by Pakistan's Army Strategic Force Command. On November 16 Pakistan test-fired a Ghauri missile with a longer range of 1,300 kilometres (812 miles) away.

The event marked the culmination of the training exercise and validated the operational readiness of the strategic missile group equipped with Shaheen-1 Missiles," the statement said.

Pakistan's Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff General Ehsan Ul Haq witnessed the launch exercise at an undisclosed location.

He hailed "the high standards achieved during training which was reflected in the successful launch and the accuracy of the missile in reaching the target," the statement said.

"Pakistan can be justifiably proud of its defence capability and the reliability of its nuclear deterrence," he added.

Neighboring India announced on Monday that its first test of a missile designed to intercept other missiles had been a success.

The test saw a surface-to-surface Prithvi-II (earth) missile, which has a range up to 250 kilometres (156 miles), shot down over the Bay of Bengal by a similar missile seconds later.

Regional rivals Pakistan and India have routinely conducted missile tests since carrying out tit-for-tat nuclear detonations in May 1998, alarming the world.
