

Corrupt businessmen control transport sector

Speakers tell CAB discussion

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

A section of corrupt businessmen backed by political forces have taken the total control of the transport sector putting it under widespread mismanagement that causes public suffering and harassment, said the speakers at a discussion yesterday.

They said with links to administration they dominate the policy-making process to increase transport fare and other facilities in their favour, while the consumers have no scope to raise their voice.

As a result, the passengers are paying higher fares, but deprived of due services and subjected to harassment in many ways due to strong connivance among a section of politicians, businessmen and government officials, they added.

The discussion on 'Mismanagement in passenger service and our duty' was organised by the Consumers Association of Bangladesh (CAB) at the Cirdap auditorium.

"The situation in the transport sector is nothing but the reflection of criminalisation at national level," said The Hunger Project Country Director Dr Badiul Alam Majumder.

Every thing in this country is conducted in the interest of the rich and corrupt people, not for the commoners, he said, adding, this system cannot continue and therefore, a united movement should be waged.

Former secretary Mohiuddin Ahmed said some political leaders during the previous government undermined the services of Bangladesh Road Transport Corporation (BRTC) by providing special facilities to private sector for their own benefit.

oping the railway, discipline can be restored in public transport sector," he added.

Former executive director of Dhaka Transport Coordination Board (DTCB) Quamrul Islam Siddique said the DTCB couldn't work independently because of its dependency on the communications ministry and the city corporation.

"Rajuk" (capital development authority) also has no transport planning," Quamrul said, adding, a strong institution should be established for the development of transport sector.

In the keynote presentation, New Age Senior Reporter Zahedul Islam said political criminalisation, extortion and unlimited greed of the owners have made the transport sector undisciplined.

According to a World Bank report, around 4000 people were killed and many more injured due to arbitrary driving by unskilled drivers and faulty transports.

Zahedul said faulty launches, carrying of excessive passengers and rotation system have made the railway dangerous.

More than 3000 people were killed in around 300 accidents, and 242 cases were filed in the last 36 years, but no accused was punished, he added.

Communist Party of Bangladesh President Manjurul Ahsan Khan said mafias have destroyed the transport sector by creating anarchy.

"The government must formulate an environment-friendly transport policy instead of making a profit-making scheme," he said.

Prof. Alamgir Mujibul Haque of Bangladesh University of Engineering and Technology said the city footpaths, which are mostly occupied for other purposes, should be freed for the pedestrians.

Suggesting formation of a transport commission, Prof Abu Ahmed of Dhaka University said the railway could be made a company with share
