Pak equipment yet to arrive!

REUTERS, Johannesburg

Pakistan's preparations for the last one-day game against South Africa on Wednesday have been upset by the loss of equipment en route from Cape Town.

Medical and video analysis material went missing after the fourth match at Newlands, which the tourists lost by 10 wickets to trail 2-1 in the series.

"Two cricket 'coffins' with computers, a TV monitor, DVD player and various other pieces of equipment have disappeared," coach Bob Woolmer told Reuters on Tuesday.

"The physiotherapist's ultrasound equipment, along with other medical supplies has also failed to arrive," Woolmer said.

"I hate to think 'typical Johannesburg airport' but unfortunately there is a bit of history. We're still hopeful that it will turn up somewhere but time is running out and we really do need the equipment to have any hope of being prepared," Woolmer said.

"We all saw the bags being checked in so they must have disappeared somewhere during the journey, or on arrival. It's close to $10,000 worth of equipment."

Kenyans to receive cash

AFP, Nairobi

Kenya's cricketers will each receive a cash payment of 5,000 dollars for their efforts in winning the World Cricket League title here this month, officials said on Tuesday.

The payment is the highest since the players, who have been going without salaries for months, will earn since their participation in the last World Cup in South Africa.

The money is part of the 250,000 dollars (17.5 million shillings) granted to the winner and runner-up of the World Cricket League Division one tournament as their participation fee for the inaugural ICC Twenty20 World Championships in South Africa in September.

Zimbabwe omitted experienced batsman Hamilton Masakadza from their World Cup squad on Wednesday. Eighteen-year-old Friday Kasteni, who made his debut in the recent home series against Bangladesh after Masakadza was dropped for the last match, won a place instead.

Masakadza, who has 39 one-day caps, did his chances of selection little good by averaging just 14 against Bangladesh.

"The selectors felt he had not done enough to warrant selection," Zimbabwe Cricket (ZC) media manager Lovemore Banda told Reuters.

The squad for the tournament starting in the West Indies next month did not include former captain Talenda Taibu, who quit Zimbabwe cricket in November 2005 after a contractual dispute.

Banda denied reports that ZC had made recent attempts to lure Taibu, who now plays in Namibia, back to the fold.

"Our door is open to former players, but the board is not doing that (luring Taibu)," Banda said.

Fast bowler Tawanda Mupariwa made the squad despite missing the Bangladesh series while he recuperated from a lingering knee injury.

Canada announced their 15-man squad for the World Cup in the Caribbean on Wednesday calling up 13 of the players who played in the recent World Cricket League series in Kenya.

In what will be the Canadians' third appearance in the World Cup, they have chosen John Davison as captain with Ashish Bagai as his assistant.

Two New Zealand-based batsmen -- Ian Billcliff and Geoff Barnett -- made the squad.

"We will have to work hard in the field in order not to give up twenty to thirty runs," coach Andy Pick said.

Meanwhile, underdogs Netherlands have gone for a tried and trusted line-up in announcing their 15-man squad for the World Cup.

The side will leave for the Caribbean on March 2 and will play two warm-up matches in Jamaica before heading on to St. Kitts where they will open their campaign against South Africa on March 16.

Besides, Ireland on Tuesday have confirmed their 15-man squad for the World Cup.

The 15 who played in the recent World League in Kenya have all been retained.

Ireland will be led by Australian-born Trent Johnston and also include Middlesex batsman Eoin Morgan and Northamptonshire wicketkeeper Niall O'Brien.

Ireland will be in Group D at the World Cup, which starts on March 11, with West Indies, Pakistan and Zimbabwe.

Flintoff not certain to be captain

AFP, London

Andrew Flintoff is not guaranteed to be England's captain at the World Cup in the event Michael Vaughan is injured.

Flintoff led England during their 5-0 Ashes thrashing in Australia.

The all-rounder was also in charge most of their ultimately successful subsequent triangular one-day series 'down under' where the team overcame a wretched start to win four straight matches, including a 2-0 victory in the best of three final against world champions Australia.

Vaughan, who missed the Ashes while recovering from a knee problem, only played in three of England's 10 one-dayers in Australia because of a hamstring injury. Nevertheless, the Yorkshire batsman was named Wednesday as captain of England's 15-man squad for next month's World Cup in the West Indies.

England chairman of selectors David Graveney said no decision had yet been taken on who would replace Vaughan if he dropped out.

"Let's be honest - we lost 5-0 in the Test series and five of our first six one-day internationals," Graveney told reporters at The Oval on Wednesday. "Andrew Flintoff deputised for Michael Vaughan in that period of time. It's only right and appropriate that he has time with his family then I'll talk to him about his views.

"I need to sit down and listen to him and have an honest chat about how it went in the (northern) winter.

"Andrew deputised in the winter and there is a process we go through. I am respecting Andrew's privacy and will have good conversation about the whole winter after that.

"My personal wish is that Michael gets off the plane at St Vincent to lead England," Graveney added.

Opening batsman Andrew Strauss, who led the team in England last year, would be a contender to captain England in the event Vaughan was injured and the selectors didn't want to give Flintoff fresh responsibility.

England are scheduled to leave for the Caribbean on March 2 and play their first warm-up match against Bermuda in St Vincent on March 5. Their first match in the tournament proper is a Group C fixture against New Zealand in St Lucia on March 16.

World Cup squad but I am a bit shocked that I did not even get a phone call from my long-time teammate and captain Habib (Bashar)," said Mashud.

So now we have to see the 'best wicketkeeper in the country' sitting it out but Mashud denies to stay quiet.

"I am a cricket player and all my life I have been involved in cricket - matches, practices, etc. So I cannot just sit and not play. I will be playing for Rajshahi in the national league, hopefully from this round (against Chittagong)," said a man regarded as one of the best wicketkeepers in the world.

"(Sourav) Ganguly can be a great example for my situation. He has showed how to get back against all adversities."

Back in April, Australian superstar Michael Hussey asked Khaled Mashud when will they meet again, just as he was checking out of his team hotel in Dhaka. He quickly answered his own question: 'See you at the World Cup'. The irony is that Hussey will definitely miss him.

It is true that Mashud's batting has been on the wane for the last year or so but it was never even expected that he would not go to the World Cup to fight one last battle.

"Arsenal find it difficult to get a victory at the Reebok Stadium," he admitted. "People say how 'long ball' and physical they are -- but they play good football too."

Vaughan made captain at Graveney's wish

AFP, London

Chairman of selectors David Graveney said it was "my wish" that Michael Vaughan captained England after the injury-prone Yorkshire batsman was named Wednesday to lead his country in a 15-man squad for next month's World Cup in the West Indies.

Vaughan, who has never scored a one-day international hundred, was restricted to only three of the 10 matches during England's recent victorious limited-overs series in Australia after suffering hamstring trouble on his comeback from a year out with knee problems.

But Graveney told a press conference at The Oval: "Let's be honest -- we lost 5-0 in the Test series and five of our first six one-day internationals.

"Andrew Flintoff deputised for Michael Vaughan (as captain) in that period of time. It's only right and appropriate that he has time with his family then I'll talk to him about his views.

"My personal wish is that Michael gets off the plane at St Vincent to lead England," Graveney said. "It is dangerous for the layman to quantify an injury. We have a staff who will keep us informed and we will give any player as much time as we can."

England bounced back from a wretched start in the triangular series, which also featured New Zealand, to win four matches in a row, including three over world champions Australia.

"The selectors were delighted with the team's outstanding performance in winning the Commonwealth Bank (Triangular) Series and we have retained the bulk of the squad who were in Australia for the World Cup," Graveney explained.

Along with Vaughan, star batsman Kevin Pietersen also missed the finals with a rib injury.

Graveney said Pietersen was fit but concerns remained over pace bowlers in James Anderson (back) and Jon Lewis (ankle).

He added that the quicks, as well as Vaughan, would have their fitness assessed before the squad left for the Caribbean.

England, and several other nations, are taking advantage of a more relaxed approach from the International Cricket Council (ICC) who, unlike previous World Cups, have told teams that injured players can be replaced providing the technical committee approve the request.

Wicketkeeper Paul Nixon, the lone specialist gloveman, and Essex all-rounder Ravi Bopara, both of whom made their one-day debuts in Australia, were included in the squad.

Graveney said Bopara -- who he labelled a "big-match" player even though he has appeared in just one limited-overs international -- got the nod ahead of hard-hitting Lancashire opening batsman Mal Loye, a replacement for Vaughan in Australia, because he brought a "better balance" to the squad.

There was no place for 20-year-old Leicestershire quick Stuart Broad, the son of former England opener Chris, who impressed when making his debut against Pakistan last year.

"He hasn't disappeared off the radar," said Graveney. "It was a hard call."

Pressed on the question of cover for Nixon, he added: "The likes of Ed Joyce and Andrew Strauss would be having to dig out a spare pair of wicketkeeping gloves."

England have never won a World Cup although they were losing finalists in 1979, 1987 and 1992.

But they have made little impression on recent editions and Graveney said: "We have underperformed in World Cups. We are a young side and we have got to make sure we are on the money right away."

England are in Group C along with New Zealand as well as minnows Kenya and Canada. Points from group victories against opponents who also qualify for the second-phase 'Super Eight' stage are carried over.

"New Zealand is a very big game, because when you get to the later stages the first game counts," Graveney stressed.

England are scheduled to leave for the Caribbean on March 2 and play their first warm-up match against Bermuda in St Vincent on March 5. Their first match in the tournament proper is against New Zealand in St Lucia on March 16.

Stung by losing their home tri-series final to England, the Australian cricketers flew into New Zealand Wednesday looking for a whipping boy.

"I think we're going to be pretty dangerous," stand-in captain Mike Hussey warned ahead of the three-match Chappell-Hadlee series which starts on Friday.

With Australia on a rare two-game losing streak "the guys are very motivated to do well."

"Obviously we're disappointed and hurting a bit from the Commonwealth Bank series loss to England, so we're pretty motivated to change the momentum and try and get some confidence up heading into the World Cup."

Hussey said the Chappell-Hadlee series was an important contest in itself and not just preparation for the World Cup, which begins in the West Indies next month.

"This is the series I want to focus on and this is the series I want to win," he said.

Hussey has stepped into the leadership role with Australia resting regular captain Ricky Ponting and vice-captain Adam Gilchrist ahead of the World Cup.

In his only previous outing as Australia captain, Hussey suffered a three-wicket defeat to the West Indies last September, giving him further motivation to do well against New Zealand.

that decided who would play Australia in the tri-series finals.

The promising Ross Taylor moves up one place in the batting order to replace Fulton at number three in the batting order after making a good first impression on the Australians when scoring 84 in his maiden innings in Hobart.

It is a prospect that doesn't phase the 22-year-old.

"I enjoyed batting at four, though at three you can get in early and you've got more time to get yourself in," he said.

"You have more of a licence to play a few more shots, you're one down rather than two."

Taylor is averaging 36.23 after 14 one-day internationals, scoring at a brisk 84 runs per 100 balls faced.

"I think I naturally score quite quickly and even if I take up a few balls to get in hopefully I can catch up with them later on."

The three-match series begins in Wellington on Friday. The other games are in Auckland on Sunday and Hamilton on Tuesday.

Manchester City; a club that reach the top of the table. I know that I can play one, two, or three good seasons and bounce back with another club. I can also stay at Bolton for the rest of my career and still play well.

"Today, I can see myself finishing my career with Bolton. Why not? I have experienced a lot of things with clubs in different countries. I could settle here. But I know that I have the qualities to play for a bigger club."

"In life, you don't always do what you want to."

Anelka also feels that his legendary attitude as a young player has affected his reputation to this day -- he insisted on leaving Arsenal for Real Madrid where, after failing to settle, he followed with an ill-fated move to PSG, a brief loan spell at Liverpool and two seasons at Manchester City, from where he became frustrated with the lack of European football and was sold to Fenerbahce.

"The big clubs avoid me because of my reputation," he said. "This has nothing to do with what I do on the pitch. But I have never had problems with my coaches or teammates in England."

"If Liverpool had decided to keep me after my loan, I would still be there today."
