

Hold polls in shortest possible time

Speakers tell roundtable

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Civil society members yesterday stressed the need to bring about electoral reforms on a priority basis in order to hold a free, fair and meaningful election.

As part of the reforms, the authorities should take immediate steps to make the registration of political parties mandatory, adopt measures for quick disposal of election-related disputes and to recast the constitutional institutions such as Anti-Corruption Commission and Public Service Commission, they said at a roundtable.

They also suggested empowering the Election Commission (EC) to cancel candidature.

They called on the caretaker government to hold an acceptable election in the shortest possible time after preparing a voter list in order to hand over power to an elected government.

Shujan or Shushashoner Janney Nagorik organised the roundtable on 'What needs to be done to hold a fair and meaningful election' at the National Press Club in the city.

The speakers said the candidates must submit their personal information and statements of wealth to the EC so that the people can choose the right person as their representative.

Moderating the roundtable, former adviser to the caretaker government M Hafizuddin Khan suggested involving the Union Parishads in preparing the electoral roll.

The caretaker government should hold Upazila and national elections simultaneously, depoliticise the administration and the Public Service Commission, strengthen the local government and ensure empowerment of voters, he said.

About the voter list, some speakers said only local government representatives can help prepare an acceptable voter list in the quickest possible time. Otherwise, it will take long time to do so, they added.

Ferdous Ahmed Qureshi said, "We should prepare union-based permanent voter roll and it would be updated with the help of Union Parishad."

Presenting a keynote paper, Shujan Secretary Badiul Alam Majumdar said the political parties should launch a drive against the bad elements within the party and take action against them.

The political parties should not nominate corrupt people in the election, he said, adding that the election would not be meaningful unless the political parties and candidates comply with the election rules.

The Election Commission should also take steps to put a curb on the election expenses of candidates and to dispose of election-related disputes quickly, he said.

Former adviser to the caretaker government ASM Shahjahan stressed the need for transparency of the Election Commission activities.

He also urged the authorities to review the appointments made on the basis of political considerations during the tenure of previous government.

Former adviser to the caretaker government Mainul Hossain Chowdhury, ABM Musa, Syed Abul Maksud, Syed Anwar Hossain, Prof Asif Nazrul, Shah Abdul Hannan, Sheikh Shahidul Islam, Firoz M Hasan and AG Mahmud also spoke.

Russia moves to stop spread of deadly bird flu strain

AFP, Moscow

Russian officials announced measures to prevent the spread of bird flu yesterday, a day after the discovery of the deadly H5N1 strain at two farms near Moscow.

Confirmation of the strain, which is potentially fatal to humans who come into contact with infected birds, came on Saturday evening at Odintsovo and Domodedovo. Both are within a 50-kilometre (31-mile) radius of the capital.

All the birds at the farms had been killed, said officials.

"We are taking all necessary measures," said Nikolai Vlasov, director of veterinary inspection for agricultural agency Rosselkhoznadzor.

"The farms have been disinfected. The experts are treating vehicles that are leaving the areas where the virus was discovered," said Vlasov, adding that access in and around the region had been restricted.

Last month, the H5N1 virus was recorded in poultry plants in the Krasnodar region, 1,000 kilometres south of Moscow, but the current outbreak is the first near the capital, home to more than 10 million people.

The Russian find follows recent outbreaks in Britain and Turkey, while Hungary reported the first detected case of the strain in January, the first such outbreak in the European Union since mid-2006.

"Poultry plants in the region have been put under strict control for a year," said Vlasov, adding that the Russian public had nothing to fear.

Russian authorities on Saturday said another farm at Podolsk, 40 kilometres south of the capital, was suspected of being contaminated after 44 dead birds were found, but tests had still to confirm this.

And on Sunday a fourth farm at Taldom, 110 kilometres north of Moscow, was under suspicion of housing a further outbreak, with authorities still conducting tests.
