Southeast University celebrated Valentine's Day and Falgun

On a cloudy morning of February 14, 2007, the Department of English of Southeast University (SEU) celebrated Valentine's Day and ushered the season-king, Spring. Professor M Abdul Baten, Chairman, Department of English, along with other colleagues of the Department, joined the program that started with a modern song performed by a 3rd semester student, Janet. Then came Taskina with another song, "My heart will go on.

Mahboob, Nayan, Safayet and others came on the dais and performed their pieces. The program ended with the awarding of best-dressed person (female) prize to two 3rd semester students Sagufta and Zebin, who really took the trouble (or pleasure) of being ornate in their outfits. And as there was no competitor to claim the same award for male, Mr Rajib Ahmed, Lecturer and Coordinator of the Department of English, helplessly pocketed the prize as he happened to be the only person wearing a Panjabi that day. The pleasant morning ripened into a brownish afternoon when all were treated to light refreshment followed by a movie show. At the end, everyone equivocally agreed that the day spent in joy and merriment would be a day to remember!
