

'Sudden sharp' rise in taxes annoy Sylhet city dwellers

IQBAL SIDDIQUEE, Sylhet

A sharp rise in holding tax by Sylhet City Corporation (SCC) has sparked commotion among city dwellers. Every day, hundreds of people throng the SCC tax department to know reasons behind the 'sudden and irrational increase' in taxes.

The officials only give them a form of review petition without giving any satisfactory explanation, some people told this correspondent at SCC office.

However, the city corporation has extended the date for submitting appeal/review petitions till April 1, they said.

The SCC did not raise the holding tax in last five years after the Sylhet Pourashava was upgraded to a city corporation, sources in SCC told this correspondent yesterday.

A resident of Dariapara area in the city alleged that his holding tax was raised to Tk 1500 from Tk 110 per year. My small tin shed structure stands on only two decimal land whereas the same amount had been fixed for my neighbouring house on about 40 decimal land, he alleged.

Ayub Ali of Subidbazar area said his tax has been re-fixed at Tk 4500 against the previous amount of Tk 900.

Elected representatives did not do the 'unpopular job' apprehending commotion and fearing loss of vote, they said.

However, with the takeover by the caretaker government, the situation has changed. A good number of people voluntarily go to the the corporation's tax department every day to pay taxes which remained outstanding for long. There has been a huge rush for payment of other dues like water bill.

"We are ready to clear the dues and pay taxes but the main problem lies with the SCC staff", alleged Md. Anwar Hossain of Ambarkhana area in the city.

"Our ward commissioners and the Mayor were not serious to realise taxes. In the changed situation, they are to do the big job in a hurry", he said.

Shamsu Miah of Kumarpara said, "The SCC authorities are now just harassing us in the name of fixing new rates".

Abdul Mannan of Shibganj area alleged that, in the absence of a uniform rate, SCC staff are taking decisions at whims while fixing the revised rates of holding tax.

Shamsunnahar Khanom of Rainagar area said, "Our commissioners and the Mayor were busy with other jobs whereas crores of taka remained outstanding with the city dwellers for long. But there was no action or any notice even. All of them are too much active now and taking advantage of the situation".

However, SCC Ward

Commissioner Syed Ahmed Hossain told The Daily Star that the city corporation staff were directed to follow existing rules in re-fixing holding tax. If there is anything wrong, it will be corrected, he claimed.

The revised rates were fixed on the basis of a survey done about two years ago but the taxes were not re-fixed.

Normally, the yearly holding tax should be equivalent to two months' rent of a house, said an official in SCC. However, it will vary in case of multi-storied buildings, he added.

Mayor Badar Uddin Ahmed Kamran said the SCC has decided to constitute review bodies at ward level. These will comprise a lawyer, a ward commissioner, Mayor's representative and an SCC engineer. The review boards will start work in April, he added.

OUR CORRESPONDENT, Netrakona

The party in power came as a magic lamp for JCD activist Khairul Murshed. He became a millionaire allegedly by virtue of being a personal assistant (PA) to former state minister for home Lutfuzzaman Babar.

He now owns 10 decimal land worth about Tk one crore in Uttara in Dhaka, a 50-acre farmland worth about Tk one and half crore, a big luxurious house in his native village Barivadera in Madan upazila. He also owns a big house in Ukilpara in Netrakona town, allegedly built by grabbing a government land, sources in intelligence agencies said. He also owns flats in Dhaka, they disclosed.

The sources said Khairul Murshed has about Tk 10 crore in four bank accounts in Dhaka.

Sources in the district police said they are hunting for Khairul.

Asked whether he is on the arrest list, one source said, "Now list is not needed to arrest any corrupt person".

Khairul's main income source was collecting money from the contractors of different projects in the name of "minister's political expenditure".

Allegation have it that he also earned money promising transfer and promotion of officials in Netrakona district by using the name of the former state minister.

Khairul was a student of Netrakona University College and a JCD (Jatiyatabad) Chhatra Dal leader. He could not pass Master's degree. He took part in the election of Netrakona University College Student Union as VP candidate under the banner of JCD in 1995 but failed.

After the 2001 election when Babar became state minister for home, he returned Netrakona town.

In July 2003 Babar appointed him as his PA. This gave him the scope to earn illegal money. He also engaged some 'agents' in Netrakona to realise toll and percentage from different government departments.

He also used to receive realised money to influence cases, the sources claimed.

One Jewel, now in Netrakona jail, was his main agent. Jewel organised a group which used to collect toll.

Correction

The Daily Star in a news item "A 'beauty spot' falls to land grabbers," published on March 12 inadvertently wrote 'acre' in place of 'kear.'

In the second paragraph of the story it should be read 'around 50-kear sheet of water.' Locally a 'kear' is equivalent to about 30 decimals of land whereas an acre is 100 decimals.

We regret the mistake.
