KARIM WAHEED teaching) until she was 13. Her family then moved to the suburbs of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, where she completed high school. She considers Philadelphia her first real home in the US. She did business underground and graduated school there. However, San Francisco, where she lived from 2001 to 2005 and did her writing degree, is her favourite city. In summer 2005, she left US for Bangkok; the initial plan was to travel for a year (which has now turned into two). She spent autumn '05 in Bangkok, winter in Barcelona. In fall '06, she returned to Bangladesh on a Fulbright scholarship. The Fulbright is funding her to live in Bangladesh and India for 9 months to research and create a collection of stories, poems, and photographs that centre on perspective. Take a walk with her, and you will see the world through her eyes. The nitty-gritty: The Lovers and the Leavers is a collection of stories and images from the subcontinent. Narratives – visual and textual – highlight the beautiful paradox that is the subcontinent. It's like a labyrinth, where one goes away only to realise he/she has moved closer. The stories are not always conjunctive, but it is this trait that validates the central theme. Tales unfold through Abeer's poems, stories and photos: they could be familiar to the viewer, relatable to someone they know. Not just the "you and I", inanimate objects often become

Who are we, he asked Lovers, she said to his wrinkling nose It's not enough, he replied Not even close...

Now Stay ABEER Hoque's ongoing exhibition at Drik Gallery does not deal with a grim theme. It's not photo-journalism by any means; not even investigative. But then again labels are often overrated, unnecessary and incomprehensive. If the brand-obsessed photo-enthusiast must, the exhibition titled The Lovers and the Leavers – featuring photos and text – can perhaps be considered an expression free of formality. Abeer is a Bangladeshi-American writer. She was born in Enugu, Nigeria, and lived in the small university town of Nsukka (where her parents were both

TV play 'Moddhanho Bhoj Ki Hobey' on ATN Bangla

Moddhanho Bhoj Ki Hobey, a single episode TV play, will be aired today on ATN Bangla at 11:05am.

Written and directed by noted actor Abul Hayat, the play centres around Wasika, born to a Bihari father, who grew up as a Bangladeshi. She loves Dolon. Both are university students. After graduation they decide to get married. When Dolon informs his mother about her, she invites Wasika to lunch. The story gets a twist at this point. Everything goes well until Dolon's mother finds out about Wasika's Bihari background. She becomes furious. During the Liberation War Biharis, collaborating with the Pakistani army, killed her parents. She tells Wasika that she will never allow Dolon to marry a Bihari's daughter.

Abul Hayat, Dolly Zahur, and Tarin play lead roles in the drama.

Ethnic Diversity Council and Theatre Festival ends

Directors and playwrights exchange views with audience

AHSAN HABIB

The five-day Ethnic Diversity Council and Theatre Festival – featuring plays, documentaries and discussions – ended on April 6. On the last day a 'meet the audience' session, discussion and staging of a play were held at the Experimental Theatre Stage, Bangladesh Shilpakala Academy.

Theatrewala, a magazine on theatre, arranged a 'meet the audience' session including directors, playwrights and designers of the plays staged at the "Adibashi Natyatsab 2007". Mamunur Rashid, Mannan Hira, Jimit Chakma, Cornelius Hasda, Subhashish Sinha, Malay Bhaumik, Brindaban Das, Nimai Tikri and Faiz Zahir, responded to the audiences' queries relating to their theatrical productions staged at the festival. Hassan Shahriar, editor of Theatrewala coordinated the event.

The queries of the audiences were focused on whether the plays (except Manipuri Theatre's production Srikrishna Kirtan), could appropriately be considered 'adivasi natya'. Kania was written by a Bengali, Brindaban Das, and later translated into the Sadri language. Another Bengali Faiz Zahir guided the Chakmas to develop a play. The play Hakkanir Dhonpana was written by a Chakma playwright Mrittika Chakma. Two Bengali playwrights Mannan Heera and Malay Bhaumik jointly with Cornelius Hasda, a Santal, wrote Tunya. The audience was particularly interested to know whether these practices were the manifestation of further marginalisation of the minority cultures by imposing the dominant cultural forms.

However, the directors and playwrights view it as a cultural exchange that is essential for the growth of any national culture. Mamunur Rashid reminded everyone that no one asks whether Nurul Deener Sharajibon is a 'Bangla natya' or not, though the form of the play did not originate in Bangladesh. "Then, why should anyone question the essence of these plays, being 'adivasi natya', as their traditional language, stories, dance, music and rituals were present in the plays?" he asked.

Subhashish Sinha, the director of Srikrishna Kirtan, proposed the title 'Ethnic Theatre Festival' to avoid controversy. Manipuri, in his words, is a well-developed national identity and in the context of Bangladesh they are not 'adivasi'. "Manipuri is a unique identity, well established in the State of Manipur in India, with a fully developed modern mode of production, lifestyle and social, political and cultural institutions," he said.

Responding to a question related to mixing Bangla folk music in Srikrishna Kirtan, Subhashish said that though the play is Manipuri, Bangla folk

'Raarang' staged

CULTURAL CORRESPONDENT

Ethnic Diversity Council and theatre festival wrapped up with staging of Raarang, an Aranyak Natya Dal production at the Experimental Theatre Stage on April 6.

Raarang -- a Santal word meaning battle cry -- depicts the strife of the impoverished Santals against oppression in different ways including feudalism, bigotry and so on imposed by the dominating Bengalis.

Through the true story of Alfred Shoren, the playwright has portrayed an attempt at a revolution against discrimination. However, the 'battle cry' fails in the face of treachery of the Bengalis.

Mamunur Rashid directs Raarang. Faiz Zahir is the set and light designer of the play.
