SPORTS REPORTER

Oldham Athletic received a hostile welcome when the youth side of the English club lost their first exhibition match to Mohammedan Sporting Club yesterday.

Nigerian forward Mwach Ukwu Paul and Emeka Christina struck first half goals in the home side's 2-1 victory at the Bangabandhu National Stadium as the visitors wilted under scorching heat.

Matt Barlow scored a consolation goal for the Latics, who were forced to make nine changes at the break and looked better under lights.

A few thousand crowds, however, enjoyed a lively start by the black and whites who went ahead after 20 minutes.

Paul and Emeka dictated the terms early and their hard work paid off after Zahid initiated the move at the right flank. Taking the ball from the midfielder, Paul got inside the box but his shot came off a forest of legs and Emeka made no mistake to drill the ball into the bottom corner.

Six minutes later, Emeka forced a fine save by Ryan Smith, the goalkeeper who has already played for the senior side in the Coca Cola League 1.

Playing 4-3-3, the Oldham struggled for control in the middle but Adam Edwards threatened to score on the half hour, only to be denied by Nigerian Peter Odafe's brilliant tackle inside the box.

Mohammedan doubled the lead ten minutes from the break with Paul's clinical finish after a through ball by Mithu. Paul, the top-scorer of the ongoing B. League who has scored a double hat-trick this season, got behind a defender at the left side and exquisitely placed a left-footer into the far post from a tight angle.

It should have been 3-0 but Emeka, who broke an offside trap with Paul's pass, saw Smith palm away his shot from one-on-one.

In the last five minutes, Oldham made desperate attempts for a

Valdano slams Rafa, Jose

THE GUARDIAN

The former Real Madrid coach and World Cup winner Jorge Valdano has attacked Rafael Benitez and Jose Mourinho, insisting that they are ushering in a bleak future for football and likening the Champions League semi-final between Liverpool and Chelsea to "a shit hanging from a stick".

The Argentinian, who scored in the 1986 World Cup final and has a respected reputation as a football intellectual, claimed that Mourinho and Benitez mistrust talent because of their own failure to make it as players and said their approach is bad news for the game.

Writing in Spain's best-selling newspaper, Marca, Valdano insisted: "Football is made up of subjective feeling, of suggestion and, in that, Anfield is unbeatable. Put a shit hanging from a stick in the middle of this passionate, crazy stadium and there are people who will tell you it's a work of art. It's not: it's a shit hanging from a stick."

Valdano explained why Benitez and Mourinho were to blame for the demise of flair and creativity. "The lives of Mourinho and Benitez have crossed in a world that is ever more scrutinised and exposed by the media, which is why they look at each other with such distrust," he wrote, "but they have two things in common: a previously denied, hitherto unsatisfied hunger for glory, and a desire to have everything under control."

The half time came as a relief for the tired booters and only Barlow and Ross Thaker returned when the game resumed. The fresh legs pushed hard and it took Latics three minutes to reduce the arrears through Barlow, who sidefooted home from the edge of the six-yard box after meeting a low cross by Deane Smalley from the right.

Diego Cruciani will cut ties with Bangladesh for the second time inside one year's time with his head high, unlike his first departure that was under controversy.

The Argentine coach, who was not paid his last month's salary by the Bangladesh Football Federation (BFF) which extended his one-year contract to guide the national team, is going out as Abahani coach on his will.

Cruciani joined Abahani in February this year but is leaving the club midway through their B. League campaign mainly due to pressure of the fans, the 43-year-old revealed this on Monday night confirming that he was not sacked by Abahani for bad performance.

Talking to reporters at the club tent, Cruciani mentioned he was frustrated to leave Abahani like this.

Maradona vows healthy lifestyle

THE GUARDIAN

Diego Maradona has vowed to fight his illness for the sake of his daughters after being discharged from hospital following lengthy treatment for smoking, dietary- and alcohol-related problems.

He made his first public appearance on Argentinian TV station Canal 13 and stated: "I am alive and I want to continue living for my two daughters. I am going to continue fighting until the end."

"I was ill, I recognise that," he continued. "There were some very hard days, I do not recommend it to anybody. I made a mistake and paid a very high price. Today I am calm, doing the diet and taking care of myself. Now I want to rest in order to be better physically. I am not a drunk."

Maradona said his family were instrumental in his recovery. "May 16 is the birthday of my daughter Giannina and I want to enjoy it because she helped me a lot," he said. "My daughters tell me 'never again dad' and I am going to endeavour to achieve it. I want to be an example for my daughters."

Lamps' point to prove

APP, London

Frank Lampard believes Chelsea are still the best team in the Premiership and he is determined to hammer home the point by inflicting a pair of defeats on Manchester United.

Jose Mourinho's side surrendered the title to United on Sunday, but they have a chance to show they are still a match for the champions at Stamford Bridge on Wednesday and then in the FA Cup final on May 19.

Lampard will join his team-mates in forming a guard of honour for United before kick-off, but his passionate defence of Chelsea's position as the English game's top dogs makes it safe to assume he will do so grudgingly.

"The best team in the country wins the league, that's what you say, especially when you win it," Lampard said. "But I think we've got the best squad."

"We've got a huge game coming up against United in the Cup final, but words don't mean much if you start saying 'we're the best.' What matters is performance and we've had to perform against a lot of things this year."

"There are a lot of reasons we lost the league and some of them weren't in our control. We can't make excuses and have to give credit to United who've had a great season, but I believe that without the injuries to Petr and John and many, many more there wouldn't be that gap in points."

"To me that's just a fact. But it's no excuse and all credit to United for what they've achieved. But we'll be back."

Lampard insists Chelsea will return stronger than ever after learning the lessons of a traumatic season.

The most important issue to be resolved now Mourinho's future seems settled is the failure of Andriy Shevchenko and Michael Ballack to assimilate themselves into the win-at-all-costs mentality of the Chelsea dressing room.

Mourinho hinted after Sunday's match at Arsenal that he was unhappy with the efforts of a small group of his players and it seems likely Shevchenko and Ballack were uppermost in his thoughts.

While Lampard refused to single out any of his colleagues, the England midfielder was equally vociferous in his belief that not every player was pulling in the same direction.

"We've fought against a lot of things, big injuries to big players at big times in the season and points we wouldn't have lost if we'd lost," he said.

"There've been other problems at the club and they have to be addressed, simple as that. We cannot and have not to lose the spirit that has got us where we are, with certain people."

"You'll emphasise what we're about. Next year we have to make sure we're focussed on being champions again. If we keep saying those things we've been battling against we have to put them right."

"It's been difficult, but you have to focus and learn through all these

WC qualifying draw in November

APP, Kuala Lumpur

The draw for the qualifying round of the 2010 football World Cup will take place in Durban, South Africa, on November 23, FIFA president Sepp Blatter said Tuesday.

"The draw for the preliminary round of the 2010 World Cup will be held in Durban on November 23 this year," he said at the Asian Football Confederation Congress here.

The city will also play host to a series of meetings by officials from world governing body FIFA to discuss preparations for the tournament.

Around 3,000 delegates -- including FIFA senior figures and national team coaches -- are expected to attend.

Ribery wants foreign sojourn

APP, Paris

France midfielder Franck Ribery has said that if he leaves Marseille in the close season, it will be to play abroad.

Ribery burst on to the international scene at last year's World Cup in Germany and he has been attracting attention from French champions Lyon and from several big European clubs.

Much will likely depend if his current club Marseille manage to qualify for next season's Champions League and they are currently on track to do that with just three games to go in the French first division.

But if they don't, Ribery said he would be keen to play abroad.

"It's true that last year Lyon and other clubs were very interested in me, but now it's playing abroad that attracts me," he told France Football.

"I know for sure that a country like Germany would not interest me much - I prefer the leagues in England or Spain."

"But on the other hand I would have to great problem in staying with Marseille as I like it a lot here. Maybe a few good transfers would help us."

Andriy Shevchenko's miserable season at Chelsea has been hit by fresh mystery after it emerged that he would have groin surgery today, meaning he will miss the FA Cup final against Manchester United.

Initially it had been stated that the Ukrainian would have his operation at the end of the season but it has been confirmed that he has played his last game of this campaign.

The Chelsea manager, Jose Mourinho, is understood to have felt that Shevchenko had exaggerated the effects of the injury, which forced him to miss last week's Champions League semi-final second leg against Liverpool.

Shevchenko has been dogged by difficulties since his £30m move from Milan last summer and has scored only 14 goals all season. His signing is widely believed to have been initiated by Roman Abramovich and Shevchenko has been frustrated by the lack of support he has received from Mourinho.

Drogba has been the Chelsea manager's preferred striker and his treatment of Shevchenko is widely believed to have contributed to his strained relationship with the club's Russian owner. The situation became so bad in January that it emerged that Abramovich wanted the Portsmouth technical director, Avram Grant, to be brought in to work directly with Shevchenko. That idea was strongly resisted by Mourinho, although Grant may still arrive at the end of the season in the position of director of football.

Shevchenko has been linked with a move back to Milan this summer and there were reports last night that Chelsea have agreed to sign Reading's Steve Sidwell. The former Arsenal midfielder is out of contract in June and has been covetted by clubs including Newcastle United.

Pardew offers no excuses

APP, London

Alan Pardew admitted Charlton deserved to be relegated after his side crashed out of the Premiership.

The south London club's slender hopes of avoiding the drop were extinguished on Monday as Tottenham won 2-0 at The Valley thanks to goals from Dimitar Berbatov and Jermaine Defoe.

Defeat confirmed Charlton's return to the Championship after seven years in English football's top division and Pardew conceded the club had only themselves to blame after a chaotic campaign.
