No UGC budget for salary of RU controversial staffs

RU CORRESPONDENT

The University Grants Commission (UGC) decided that it would not sanction budget for salaries of more than five hundred Rajshahi University (RU) teachers, officials and employees for their recruitment was not made following the due process.

Campus sources said a two-member budget-inspection team of UGC finance committee led by UGC Finance Director Ibrahim Kabir visited the campus recently to investigate the issue of alleged illegal recruitment.

Upon investigation, they found that most of the recruitment was made without UGC permission and not as per the rules and regulation formed by UGC to prevent mass and political recruitment in public universities, campus sources said.

According to UGC rules, if any university needs recruitment, it must take permission from the UGC as well as approval from education and finance ministries, sources said.

Violating the rules, RU authorities recruited the teachers, officials and employees during BNP-Jamaat government tenure under political consideration, the source added.

The team asserted that the recruitment was a gross violation of rules and declared it illegal, adding that if the university authorities do not cancel the recruitment, the UGC will not disburse the last allocated money in the fiscal year 2006-2007.

Moreover, the UGC will not sanction any allocation for additional recruitment, a university high official said.

When contacted, RU VC Prof Altaf Hossain claimed that the recruitment was made against vacant posts.

When asked about UGC sanction, he said "We will present the real picture of the university to the UGC and request them for sanctioning the allocation".

Last year, university teachers and student organisations agitated against alleged mass recruitment, corruption, irregularities and violation of the University Act by the RU administration during the BNP-Jamaat rule.

The suggestions include eradication of mosquitoes, realisation of municipal taxes, implementation of healthcare project and proper registration of birth and death.

A nine-member team of TIB and Shachetan Nagorik Committee exchanged views with city mayor at 11:00am in his office at Nagor Bhaban.

City mayor assured the team that the suggestions would be implemented in phases if fund is available.

Explaining the plan, the army team said the voters' registration forms will be distributed among those who will visit the centres and the officials at the centres will help the prospective voters fill them in.

During the demonstration, the army team prepared a sample voter list containing particulars of two of the present reporters and prepared their national identity cards using a computer program in about 20 minutes.

The software was developed locally under the supervision of the army, they said.

On the political parties' demand for consultation with them on preparing the voter list, the CEC said the preparation of the voter list with photographs is a settled issue. The political parties demanded it, and so the EC did not consult with them.

"If a consensus is reached on some major issue, it is the responsibility of the Election Commission to decide how the task will be implemented. It is not possible to discuss all things with the political parties," he added.

"However, we are still saying that the political parties are our main clients and nothing will be done without discussing with them," the CEC said.

On the political parties' demand for following the laws while preparing the voter list, he said the existing laws do not allow a voter list with photographs. "We have decided to amend the laws for voter list with photographs," Huda said.

The army experts team said they suggested for collecting particulars from people aged 16 and above. They showed reporters a form that will collect particulars about a prospective voter on 25-26 issues. However,

"The way the voters go to polling stations will have to be applied to bring prospective voters to the registration centres. We are planning to assign representatives from local government bodies, both sitting and former, chowkidars and ansars to bring people to the centres," Huda said.

"We are even examining if these centres could be set up in the neighbourhoods," he added.

Election Commissioner Sahul Hossain told The Daily Star that usually a polling station covers one big or two small villages. But if the voters' registration centres are set up in the neighbourhoods, the number of centres will increase for each village and cityward.

In its demonstration, the army team explained to journalists the ways for simultaneous preparation of the voter list and national identity cards.

They said the field level task for voter listing will be completed within five-six months by January 2008, according to the EC plan to start the task in August.

A draft electoral roll of an area will be published one day after the task for that area is completed. And we hope that the Election Commission will get the master copy of the voter list with photographs after five-six months," a senior army official told reporters.

Talking to reporters, CEC Huda however said he cannot guess any time line until the task begins at the field level.
