McClaren pays tribute to Becks

England coach Steve McClaren has not seen David Beckham play since he dumped him from the national team after the World Cup.

With his job on the line, however, McClaren is ready to recall the Real Madrid midfielder to England's starting line-up.

Beckham is set to start in a friendly against Brazil at Wembley on Friday and in a European Championship qualifier at Estonia on June 6. England needs to win at Estonia to keep its chances of qualifying for Euro 2008 on track.

When McClaren took over the England coaching job from Sven-Goran Eriksson in August, his first decision was to drop Beckham from the team. Beckham was seen as untouchable under Eriksson even as his celebrity off the field was threatening to overshadow his form on it.

Now, McClaren believes Beckham has played his way back onto the squad.

"David is the fittest I have seen him for a long time," McClaren said Tuesday. "He showed a great hunger and desire to get back. He didn't moan. He just got his head down and worked hard. I don't know whether it is a question of proving me wrong, but the statistics are there."

McClaren said he followed the lead of Real Madrid coach Fabio Capello, who reversed a decision to dump Beckham from the Spanish club after Beckham announced in January he would sign with Major League Soccer's Los Angeles Galaxy after his contract ends June 30.

"You've got to respect the work Fabio Capello is doing at Real Madrid," McClaren said. "He has had the same problems as me. He had no hesitation about bringing David back when he was on form and that has changed the fortunes of Real Madrid. I would be very foolish to ignore that."

Real Madrid, chasing its first major trophy since Beckham's arrival from Manchester United in 2003, is tied atop the Spanish league with FC Barcelona with two games remaining.

McClaren said the fitness level of the 32-year-old Beckham was impressive.

"I have not made this decision for the fans, the media or anyone else. It is about form. I will stand or fall by that, but anyone who has watched David closely over the last few weeks and months must understand why he is in the squad."

Beckham resigned as captain the day after England lost in the World Cup quarterfinals in a penalty shootout against Portugal. It was his 94th international, and Beckham has long stated his wish to reach the 100 mark.

But McClaren, Eriksson's assistant for several years, decided last August he was taking England in a different direction, saying "it's a clean sheet of paper for everybody and that's why I decided not to pick David Beckham."

Nearly a year later, and after he was jeered by fans following England's last two lacklustre games, McClaren is set to return with the midfield that largely underperformed at the World Cup.

"Leaving David out in the first place was a tough decision and he left a big void," McClaren said Tuesday.

England is fourth in Group E of Euro 2008 qualifying with 11 points from six games. Croatia leads the group with 13 points, followed by Israel and Russia with 11. Only the top two teams qualify for the tournament in Austria and Switzerland. Estonia is sixth in the seven-country group with no points after five matches.

"I have to be pragmatic," McClaren said. "Everyone knows we need to win in Estonia next week. The squad I have selected is designed to do that."

American men slump

AFP, Paris

Robby Ginepri was left with the task of saving the reputation of American men's tennis on Wednesday after eight out of nine compatriots crashed out in the French Open first round.

Former world number one Andy Roddick, the third seed, and James Blake, seeded eighth, led the retreat from Paris as the Americans suffered their worst Roland Garros performance for what's believed to be around 30 years.

Roddick lost in the first round for the fourth time in seven Roland Garros visits going down to Russia's Igor Andreev who won 3-6, 6-4, 6-3, 6-4.

The statistics told a worrying story for the American with Andreev hitting an astonishing 66 winners to Roddick's 19.

The French Open remains the 24-year-old's professional graveyard.

He has never made it past the third round despite reaching at least the semi-finals at the other three Grand Slams.

"I'm not going to give up. It's my biggest challenge. That's not a secret," said Roddick.

"I've been my own worst enemy here for a lot of times."

Blake also won the first set against Croatia's Ivo Karlovic before surrendering his first round tie 4-6, 6-4, 7-5, 7-5.

"It's no secret that we haven't done great on clay this year," said Blake.

"But I think we have the ability. Andy got a terrible draw. Andreev is probably the toughest non-seed here. I got a tough draw on Karlovic if he's serving well."

Ronaldinho gets one-match ban

AFP, Madrid

Barcelona star Ronaldinho on Tuesday received a one-match suspension from the Spanish league's competition commission for the red card he received after kicking out at an opponent in Saturday's win over Getafe.

Barca had appealed against the sending off at the Nou Camp which saw the Brazilian, who netted the only goal in the second minute, receive his red card from referee Perez Burrull for trying to kick Getafe defender David Belenguer, despite barely making any contact.

The commission, under chairman Alfredo Florez, found there had been provocation.

A two-game ban could have severely dented Barca's title hopes as they are level on points at the top with Real Madrid with only two games remaining.

Real renew Kaka hunt

Reports in Spain claim that Real Madrid are ready to resume their campaign to sign Milan star Kaka.

The Brazilian has been a primary transfer objective for the Spaniards since last summer when the Rossoneri reported Real to FIFA over their public courtship of the starlet.

However, we could be in for another summer of tension as the Spanish newspaper AS claims that Real chief Ramon Calderon intends to keep the promise made during his election campaign by netting the Golden Boy.

The Merengues are reportedly ready to invest up to £43m for the Champions League top scorer and could include Emerson in the deal, a midfielder liked by boss Carlo Ancelotti, as well as Fabio Cannavaro.

The story adds that Kaka would also be willing to make the move despite his status as a Milan fan favourite.

"I don't want to start a war, but I would be happy to join Madrid," he is quoted as saying.

Although Milan Vice-President Adriano Galliani has insisted that the South American is untouchable -- no matter what offer is tabled -- Real are still keen.

It's understood that Madrid officials Predrag Mijatovic and Franco Baldini have already been

Inter lack respect: Del Piero

After Gennaro Gattuso, now Alessandro Del Piero has told Inter to curb their enthusiasm.

"They're exaggerating with all this talk of winning."

The Nerazzurri are celebrating their Scudetto victory and have repeatedly stated it was the first 'clean' title in many years.

During their trophy presentation on Sunday, the squad joined the fans in singing 'We win without cheating' a reference to the Calciopoli scandal that saw Juventus demoted and other teams such as Milan, Lazio and Fiorentina docked points.

"With all this talk of winning they really are exaggerating now," snapped the Bianconeri captain on 'Repubblica TV'.

"They are being very disrespectful towards us and all the other sides and players in Serie A."

Inter had a record-breaking run in Serie A this season, but Del Piero points out there were obvious benefits post-Calciopoli with the penalties to other clubs.

"Inter had their work made easy for them, but they still did well to take full advantage of the situation."

Del Piero also had words for Zdenek Zeman, the Coach who sparked a widespread investigation into medicinal practices at Juventus after making insinuations on Alex's change in musculature.

"I put on 1.5kg from the age of 19 to 24. Now that they say I am more agile and lighter, I actually weigh more than I did back then."

"Most of the time appearances can be deceptive. I have always believed in hard work to better myself, in the gym and on the pitch. Some people are just stupid, though..."

Six points a must for Loew

AFP, Berlin

Germany's head coach Joachim Loew insisted on Tuesday his injury-hit side have a duty to take six points from their double-header Euro 2008 qualifiers against San Marino and Slovakia.

Germany are top of Group D and level on points with the Czech Republic and Republic of Ireland, with a game in hand, but are missing their captain -- Chelsea midfielder Michael Ballack -- as well as striker Lukas Podolski and influential midfielder Bastian Schweinsteiger.

And Loew, who has only lost once in nine games since taking over from Jurgen Klinsmann after last year's World Cup, says only convincing wins -- especially over minnows San Marino on Saturday -- will be acceptable.

"We are preparing hard for these games," said Loew as his squad gathered for Saturday's game in Nuremberg and next Wednesday's game against Slovakia in Hamburg.

"This is no holiday camp for the players, we have two important qualifying games."

"We have a duty to take six points and I have made that clear."

The 47-year-old has left his squad
