

Dreadful disaster if hill cutting continues in Ctg

Says Save the Environment Movement report on mudslide

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Speakers at a press conference yesterday warned of dreadful disaster in not-too-distant future if the ruthless hill cutting and unplanned urbanisation cannot be stopped immediately in Chittagong city and adjoining areas.

The press conference was organised by Save the Environment Movement at the National Press Club in the city to present its report on the recent mudslide in Chittagong that claimed 129 lives and damaged properties worth crores of taka.

A team of Save the Environment Movement visited the affected areas and prepared the report.

In his report, Prof ASM Maksud Kamal of geology department at Dhaka University said the destruction of natural slope of hills by cutting to an angle over 75 degrees is one of the main causes of the landslide.

He recommended that the vulnerable people who are living at the foothills should be immediately removed and the government should go for afforestation particularly with those trees, which will conserve the soil.

Abu Naser Khan, convener of Save the Environment Movement, said though 12 landslides at Lebubagan, Kachipara, Segantoppara, Motijhorna, Debarpar, Chittagong University and Foy's lake area caused the fatalities, over one hundred landslides occurred at various parts of the district on that day.

He observed that denuding of hills and initiating of new plantation by destroying the natural forest were also responsible for the landslide.

Prof AQM Mahbub of geography and environment department stressed on proper drainage system so that the rainwater can flow down easily from the hills.

"The canals, which were grabbed by money-mongers, should be recovered without delay," he said, adding, people who are staying in this region must adopt the technology of indigenous people.

Giving support to this observation, Major General (Retd) Amin also said the indigenous people in Chittagong Hill Tracts use very light materials to build their houses.

"The hills which are made of sedimentary rocks, cannot endure any strong foundation," he observed.

Prof Moniruzzaman of Bangladesh University of Engineering and Technology termed the disaster 'revenge of nature' and insisted on bringing unplanned urbanisation to an end right now.

'Promote use of mother tongue in literacy programme'

DU CORRESPONDENT

Experts at an international workshop yesterday said the use of mother tongue and national language in literacy programme must be promoted in order to reach the Millennium Development Goal of 'Education for All' (EFA) by 2015.

While learning the national language is important, numerous researches conducted all over the world have reached the same conclusion that quality education or literacy can be acquired in only mother tongue, they said.

Organised by Unesco Dhaka in collaboration with Unesco Bangkok and Unesco Institute of Lifelong Learning, the five-day workshop on 'Improving Quality of Mother Tongue/Bilingual Literacy Programmes and Activities' began in the city yesterday.

Japanese ambassador Masayuki Inoue formally inaugurated the workshop at Hotel Sarina, said a press release.

Mentioning that there is only eight years' time to achieve the target of basic education for all, he said it would take persistent and concerted efforts of all quarters involved to attain that goal.

Recalling the Bangalis' glorious sacrifice to establish their right to speak in their mother tongue, Inoue hoped that Bangladesh would accomplish the present challenge of achieving universal literacy.

Malama Meleisea, Unesco representative in Bangladesh, underscored the significance of conducting literacy programmes in mother tongue to facilitate universal access to education.

"Unesco believes in and promotes cultural diversity and when one promotes mother tongue, one is promoting cultural diversity."

Participants from Bangladesh, Cambodia, China, India, Indonesia, Nepal, Philippines, Thailand, Vietnam, Malaysia, Afghanistan, Latin America and Africa are taking part in the workshop.

Some of the main issues that featured in the workshop included 'capacity-building in designing mother tongue/bilingual literacy programmes', 'literacy teaching learning methodologies for bilingual education', 'developing strategies for establishment of interregional networks and policy dialogues'.

'Withdraw VAT, tax on private varsities'

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

The Association of Private Universities of Bangladesh (APUB) yesterday called upon the government to withdraw value added tax (VAT) on tuition fees and tax on private universities as proposed in the national budget for 2007-08 considering the academic career of students.

At a press conference, the association leaders said VAT is a business-related issue and it has no conceptual linkage with non-government universities which are engaged in imparting education and developing human resources for the society.

APUB organised the press conference at Dhaka Reporters Unity auditorium where vice-chancellors, founders and chairmen of different private universities termed the newly imposed VAT and tax on private universities as 'illogical'.

"The private universities have substantially reduced the burden on public exchequer. They are now enrolling around 85,000 students with no grant from the government. The proposed VAT is not only conceptually incoherent but also discriminatory because VAT has been proposed only for private universities and not for public universities," said A Kashem, chairman of APUB.

Prof M Shamsher Ali, vice-chancellor of Southeast University, said it will have negative impact on education as around one lakh students are now studying at private universities and their numbers are increasing day by day.

Vice-chancellor of Independent University of Bangladesh Bazlul Momen Chowdhury and Vice-chancellor International University of Business Agriculture and Technology Prof M Alimullah Miyan were also present at the press conference.

He said from a statistics of the University Grants Commission, it is found that, of the total students enrolled in higher education in the country, 10 percent are admitted to public universities while six percent to non-government universities.

Prof M Shamsher Ali, vice-chancellor of Southeast University, said VAT and tax are not imposed on universities anywhere in the world and totally unheard in Saarc countries.

"In harmony with the practice of supporting higher education institutions in the region and around the globe, the proposal for VAT and tax should be withdrawn," he added.

Abul Quasem Haider, founder chairman of Eastern University, said it will have negative impact on education as around one lakh students are now studying at private universities and their numbers are increasing day by day.
