

AVIAN INFLUENZA

Fresh outbreak will spell disaster: Experts

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

There is no difference between avian influenza and bird flu, said

UNICEF communication officer at a press briefing yesterday.

The press briefing on 'Bird Flu' was organised by UNICEF at its office in the city.

"In good faith the bodies concerned created confusion..., we failed to translate the word in our language," said Shamsuddin Ahmed.

He said the bodies concerned including the ministries of information, health and livestock along with other UN organisations held a number of sessions to contextualise the avian influenza in Bangladesh perspective.

Shamsuddin said the role of media regarding the potential bird flu epidemic should be to accurately and effectively inform the public and not to create panic.

"The role of media is not to scare, but to inform," he added.

During his power point presentation, Shamsuddin apprised of avian influenza or bird flu and its effect on a country like Bangladesh, where poultry is the source of income for at least 40 lakh families, 1 crore 60 lakh women in rural areas breed fowls and 1 lakh 24 thousand farmers produce corn, fish and other poultry feeds.

Experts fear if there is another outbreak of bird flu in a tropical country like Bangladesh, it would spell a disaster for the public as well for the poultry sector, where the investment is at least Tk 12000 crore, he added.

Stressing on changing the health habits of people, Shamsuddin insisted on keeping the children far from the fowls since a study showed that of the 191 death cases, 40 percent were children.

"No longer is bird flu relegated only to birds, as the virus strengthens and mutates, resulting in a contagion that can move from bird to human," he said, disseminating the comment of Dr David Nabaro, UN coordinator on influenza chapter, that the pandemic in future would cause death of people ranging from 50 lakh to 15 crore.

He said the issue is not a far-away topic now for Bangladesh and people should be aware of it since the scientists are yet to invent any medicine that would cure the disease.

Later he discussed how UNICEF is conducting the awareness programme by involving people from all strata.

"We have involved 'Village theatre' to hold 800 dramas to enlighten the rural people and children, and we have trained up 3.5 lakh people with the Japanese grant worth US $1.2 billion," he added.

He also apprised the reporters of the steps taken by the government which include formulating and adopting the strategy to prevent bird flu and human influenza pandemic.

'No Australian edn institutions operate off-shore campus in Bangladesh'

Australian High Commissioner to Bangladesh Douglas Foskett has said Australian universities have an international reputation for excellence in teaching and research.

"All Australian higher education institutions have mechanisms in place to ensure that the quality of their courses and services meets the highest standards," he added.

The high commissioner was responding to recent publication by the University Grants Commission (UGC) of a list of 56 "illegal" branches of foreign universities in Bangladesh, says a press release.

The list published by the UGC may have inadvertently created the wrong impression that a number of Australian universities are operating illegally in Bangladesh.

"To clarify the situation, I can confirm there are no Australian education institutions operating any off-shore campuses in Bangladesh", said the high commissioner.

"I also wish to reassure any prospective student, and their parents, who may be considering an education in Australia, that they will receive a world-class education while enjoying the lifestyle benefits that our country offers," he added.

The high commissioner said it is very encouraging that students from Bangladesh continue to choose Australia as their education destination.

The UGC list names a number of well-known Australian tertiary institutions.

It should be stressed that these are not references to the universities themselves but rather to education agents in Bangladesh who represent these institutions.

These education agents do not deliver any education services in this country.

The Australian High Commission has been working with the UGC to correct any misperceptions regarding the status and presence of Australian educational institutions in Bangladesh, the press release added.

Govt wants credible polls Says Mainul

BSS, Dhaka

The present caretaker government wants to hold a credible election so that an honest, competent and accountable government may come to power.

The Election Commission (EC) has been reconstituted for this purpose and the government has taken initiatives to separate the EC secretariat from the Prime Minister's office.

Law and Information Adviser Barrister Mainul Hosen said this while talking to a four-member delegation of China Institutes of Contemporary International Relations Ministry office here yesterday, said an official handout.

During the talks, the delegation members discussed various issues, including the present political situation in Bangladesh, the ongoing reforms activities of the government and the election and investment scenario in the country.

The adviser said the EC is working to prepare a voters' list with photographs and the general elections will be held before the end of 2008 on completion of voters' enrollment, the press release added.

Elaborating the ongoing reforms activities of the government, Barrister Mainul Hosen said an independent Anti-Corruption Commission (ACC) has been reconstituted, corrupts have been put on trial under the existing law of the land and the process of separating the judiciary from the executive has been started.

The adviser said an investment-friendly atmosphere is prevailing in the country. The investment procedures are very simple here, labour costs are very cheap and facilities at the Export Processing Zones are very suitable, he added.

Terming China as a very important friend of Bangladesh, he said, "We need the support and friendship of China," and added, "Bangladesh believes in peaceful relations with its neighbours."

The delegation members appreciated the government for its ongoing reforms activities. The delegation members are Vice-president of the China Institutes of Contemporary International Relations Li Shaoxian, Director Hu Shisheng, Deputy Director He Xiquan and Research Professor Ma Jiali.

President of the Bangladesh Enterprise Institute (BEI) Faroque Sobhan was present in the meeting.

RECEPTION TO DR HUSSAM

'Ensure supply of safe water for better health'

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

The chemistry department of Dhaka University (DU) yesterday accorded a reception to its alumnus Dr Abul Hussam, a winner of the Grainger Challenge Prize for Sustainability, 2007.

The countrymen should be aware of arsenic contamination as the level of arsenic in both groundwater and surface water is rising due to various reasons, he said while delivering a lecture on 'Arsenic in Groundwater: Aquatic Chemistry and Development of a Novel Filtration Technology' at the

Censor certificate of 'Khuni Bou' cancelled

BSS, Dhaka

The government has cancelled the censor certificate of full-length film 'Khuni Bou' for exhibiting in addition to some vulgar and offscene footages.

Police cancelled the certificate of the film while it was exhibiting in Barshan Cinema Hall in Gazipur along with some uncensored scenes, an official handout said here yesterday.

The film can not be exhibited anywhere in the country until further notice.

programme.

Ensuring better health is impossible without sustained supply of safe drinking water, he added.

In most developing countries, most health hazards stem from drinking contaminated water, he said.

Dr Hussam, associate professor of chemistry and biochemistry at George Mason University, USA, and his brother Dr Munir, general secretary of Manab Shakti Unnayan Kendra, won the Grainger Challenge Prize for inventing Sono Filter, a small-scale, inexpensive technology to remove arsenic from contaminated water.

The reception ceremony was held at Mukarram Hussain Khundkar Biggan Bhaban on the DU campus.

Prof Nurun Nabi of chemistry department said the invention of Sono Filter by Abul Hussam and his brother is a great achievement and countrymen are highly proud of it.

"Their achievement is the result of their hard and sincere research work. The invention of Sono Filter will help save the lives of crores of people in South Asia," said Prof Dr Abu Zafar Mahmud.

The Sono Filter -- an easy-to-make, maintenance-free, two-tiered system that uses sand, charcoal, bits of brick and shards of a widely available kind of cast iron - removes virtually every trace of arsenic from water within two or three minutes.
