SHANTIMOY CHAKMA,
from Rangamati

The caretaker government has made changes in the three interim Hill District Councils (HDC) formed by the past four-party alliance government during its regime, sources in the CHT affairs ministry said yesterday.

The newly selected chairmen and councillors of the district councils are to take oath and take over their charges within a couple of days, added the sources.

However, the Rangamati, Bandarban and Khagrachhari district councils did not receive official orders as of yesterday, officials of the HDCs said. Fax messages from the ministry regarding the changes are being expected by today or tomorrow.

Rangamati and Bandarban district councils have been dissolved entirely while Khagrachhari district councillors have been replaced and its chairman retained, a source in the CHT affairs ministry said.

Farmers need insurance coverage for flood damage

Experts suggest

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Development experts at a seminar yesterday suggested introduction of flood insurance schemes for the farmers living in the flood-prone areas to cope with the devastating effects of this natural disaster.

The administrative cost for operating the insurance, however, should be minimised and mass awareness should be created to make people interested in such schemes, which should also be commercially viable, they noted.

The views came at the seminar on prospects for a flood insurance market in Bangladesh organised by Poverty Reduction and Environment Management (PREM) Bangladesh and International Network of Alternative Financial Institutions (INAFI) at Spectra Convention Centre in the city.

The speakers said that such a scheme would require farmers to pay a fixed amount of money for the next five years on a regular basis and the farmers would be compensated for any losses caused by floods.

LONDON MONEY TRANSFER SCAM

BB asks banks to find ways to pay clients

REJAUL KARIM BYRON

Bangladesh Bank (BB) yesterday advised local banks having partnership with London-based money transfer agency First Solution Money Transfer Ltd to examine ways to use its security deposits to pay clients who are yet to receive money sent by their relatives.

Five private banks have pending orders for transferring Tk 15.31 crore sent by Bangladeshi expatriates in London through First Solution to their clients. The agency sent invoice letters against the amount but is yet to deposit the money with the banks' foreign currency accounts abroad.

First Solution recently stopped business and applied to the authorities in London to declare it bankrupt, which created panic among clients both in London and Bangladesh. The owners of the agency went into hiding after stopping business on June 27.

BB Governor Dr Salehuddin Ahmed yesterday said the central bank sent a letter to the Bangladesh High Commission in London to investigate the matter.

The BB is also going to investigate if any other money exchange houses abroad are involved in such activities, he said.

In the last couple of days the BB held meetings with the local private banks that have agreement with First Solution to find ways to resolve the crisis.

BB officials, however, said they have little to do to compel the agency to pay the clients as it is authorised by the British government, not by Bangladesh Bank.

"We have advised the partners of First Solution here to consult their lawyers in London as well as the authorities that gave the agency permission to do the business," said a BB official after yesterday's meeting.

Eight private banks in Bangladesh are the local partners for distributing remittances sent from London through First Solution. The banks are South East Bank, National Credit and Commerce Bank Ltd (NCC), Prime Bank, Brac Bank, Uttara Bank, Eastern Bank, Mutual Trust Bank, and Janata Bank.

South East Bank alone has received invoice letters from First Solution for paying Tk 14 crore to its clients. The agency has $50,000 (around Tk 35 lakh) as security money with South East Bank.

BB sources said the NCC bank

9 killed in Pak mosque battle

AFP, Islamabad

Pakistani security forces fought fierce gunbattles with students at a pro-Taliban mosque in Islamabad yesterday after a lengthy standoff exploded into violence, leaving nine dead and 140 hurt.

Clerics at the radical Lal Masjid, or Red Mosque, threatened suicide attacks to avenge the "blood of martyrs" after the day-long clashes, which killed a soldier, four students, a journalist and three bystanders.

The shootout followed months of tension over the mosque's increasingly brazen challenges to the authority of President Pervez Musharraf, most recently by kidnapping seven Chinese citizens it accused of running a brothel.

"The deaths of nine people have been confirmed so far and more than 140 wounded," deputy interior minister Zafar Warriach told a news conference.

"A decision whether to continue the operation will be taken after assessing the ground realities. It is the government's duty to provide protection to its countrymen," Warriach added.

Security officials said the incident started when police fired volleys of tear gas after dozens of baton-wielding male and burqa-clad female students attacked policemen near the mosque, and stole four guns and a radio set.

As people fled from two busy shopping areas nearby, students wearing gas masks traded Kalashnikov fire with security forces from behind sandbags and bunkers chanting "Jihad! Jihad! (holy war)", an AFP correspondent said.

Doctors rounded up over UK bomb plot

AFP, London

Police held up to six doctors in connection with the failed bombings in London and Glasgow after an Indian physician was detained yesterday in Australia, officials and reports said.

A Jordanian neurosurgeon and an Iraqi doctor were also among the eight suspects now under questioning as the investigation spread around the world.

With Britain still on top alert for a new al-Qaeda style attack, police carried out a controlled explosion on a car near a Glasgow mosque early Tuesday. A British security source told AFP that the group had a bomb factory in the Scottish city.

The source also said all of the people implicated in the plot so far were working in the British state health system and that all the suspects were from Middle East countries.

Dhaka-Kolkata train's trial run July 8

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

The Dhaka-Kolkata train service will get its first trial run on July 8.

An Indian delegation will arrive here on the train for talks during its two-day stay to finalise details of the service.

"We are hoping to start the train service by the end of this month, but it will depend on the outcome of the meetings," Bangladesh Railways Director General Belayet Hossain told The Daily Star last night.

Sources, however, said the Indian side also expects the train service to start by the end of this month and may be as early as the third week of July, which is Dhaka's target period after a number of false starts.

Indian media had earlier reported that the train service would open on April 14, but New Delhi retreated from its position, saying the logistics were incomplete.

In the talks, the two sides will

Saga of Bangladeshi workers in Malaysia

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Around 200 migrant Bangladeshi workers gathered in front of a police station in Malaysia's central state of Negeri Sembilan on Sunday, protesting their local employment agent's reneging on a promise of arranging lucrative jobs for them in the country, leaving them unemployed for the last four months.

Malaysia's online news agency Bernama.com reported on Monday that the demonstrating workers, who had gone to Malaysia in March this year, were demonstrating because they were not given jobs and were kept in deplorable living conditions in hostels.

The aggrieved migrant workers demonstrated for several hours alleging that each of them was made to pay between 10,000 and 14,000 ringgit, which is equivalent to Tk 2 lakh to Tk 2.8 lakh, to travel to Malaysia ostensibly to join already arranged jobs, but on arrival they found themselves being victimised in a foreign land, said Mohamed Anis Miah, a representative of the workers.

"When we arrived, we were placed in a shelter with no walls for 25 days before we were moved to an overcrowded dormitory," Bernama.com quoted Anis as saying.

About 300 Bangladeshis were forced to live in the hostel, the accommodation capacity of which was for 50 people only, Anis added.

Anis also said the workers signed contracts which had promised them jobs paying 780 ringgit or Tk 16,000 a month with free accommodations.

"Now, there are not even 100 of us with jobs!" he said.

Hill plunderers' list likely to be sent to forest ministry today

OUR CORRESPONDENT, Ctg

Department of Environment (DoE) that is now finalising a list of hill plunderers in Chittagong Division is likely to send it to the Ministry of Environment and Forests today for proper action.

The list is based on a week-long field survey by seven DoE teams in Chittagong, Cox's Bazar and the three hill districts of Rangamati, Khagrachhari and Bandarban.

The DoE primarily identified over 200 individuals, organisations and business groups as plunderers of hills in 155 hilly areas in Chittagong Division that were subjected to illegal hill cutting over the last two decades.

Newly appointed DoE Director Nazmul Hoque said it is a tough job but they are trying hard to make a flawless list of those who devoured hills, and specify the areas where they did that.

Meanwhile, Chief Adviser Fakhruddin Ahmed during his visit here following the June 11
