

Political will a must to resolve regional water issues Say environmental experts

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Political will is needed to resolve bilateral and multilateral water resource management issues in the region, environmental experts said yesterday.

The issues must be addressed in order to avert any environmental catastrophe, they said at a seminar on 'Transboundary Water Resource Management: Issues and Concerns' organised by IUCN at Cirdap auditorium in the city.

Lack of political will is holding back South Asian water negotiations that seemed to have stalled, said Ainun Nishat, country representative of IUCN.

Speaking as the chief guest, Foreign Adviser Iftekhhar A Chowdhury said a 'positive trajectory' in Indo-Bangla relations will facilitate water resources negotiations between the two countries.

Bangladesh has 57 common ivers in the region, 50 of which are shared exclusively by India and Bangladesh, and only two are shared by China, India and Bangladesh.

The adviser said, "We cannot afford to live in isolation; the costs are far too many."

Both Bangladesh and India could reach a win-win situation, if they cooperate in addressing the issues of bio-diversity, desertification and intrusion of salinity and in facing the challenge of 'atmospheric changes', he said.

In his main presentation, Ainun Nishat outlined a litany of environmental disasters ranging from floods, droughts and fisheries' migration to the fall in water quality and increasing salinity. He felt trans-boundary water negotiations are imperative to resolve these issues.

One of the major reasons for stagnancy in the water-sharing negotiations is that the "Institutional setup is not working", he said referring to the Bangladesh-India Joint Rivers Commission (JRC).

The JRC is a statutory body comprised of technical experts who cannot make 'binding decisions' and as such, politicians still hold the key, he said. "Either make them more powerful or just give them all the power."

He also said Bangladesh should play an active role in ratifying the 'Convention on the law of the non-navigational uses of international water resources'.

Other speakers called for a greater participatory approach, cooperation with bordering Indian provinces and redefining the 'rights' to water.

Prof KB Sazzadur Rasheed of Buett and MH Siddiqi also spoke while Mahfuz Ullah, chairperson of IUCN Bangladesh National Committee, gave the welcome address.

First-ever contest to find out country's 7 greatest structures

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

With a view to upholding the country's historical and cultural heritage, Radio Foorti, a private FM radio station, has launched the first-ever contest titled 'The Magnificent 7' to find out seven greatest structures of Bangladesh.

"We have launched the contest being inspired by our listeners who sent several hundred short message services (sms) and emails to us after carrying out the news of seven new wonders of the world," said Sayyied Kabir, chief executive officer (CEO) of Radio Foorti, at a press conference at its office at Gulshan in the city on Friday.

"Awareness about the country's magnificent structures would be increased by the contest and people will feel an urge to protect these heritages which might be at the damaging state," he said.

Kabir said a panel of five judges has already made a short list of 21 important sites from which the people will select seven magnificent sites through sms or emails.

Prof Dr Enamul Haque, founder-director general of Bangladesh National Museum, Prof Dr Abu Sayeed M Ahmed, head of architecture department of University of Asia Pacific, Dr Syed Manzoorul Islam, professor of English department of Dhaka University, Murtaja Baseer, former professor of Fine Arts of Chittagong University and Shimul Yousuf, a noted theatre artiste, are the judges.

"Only human-built structures in an acceptable state of preservation with true artistic or archaeological value and situated within the territorial boundary of the country have been selected by the panel in making the list of 21," said Kabir, adding, the structures are from all ages and form all parts of the country.

"We are inviting all people to send sms votes that started from yesterday (July 14) and if anyone wants to vote through emails he or she needs to visit Radio Foorti's website," he added.

He said they will also give advertisement to newspapers and announce the news of the contest through their station.

Kabir said the voting will continue for a period of three weeks, ending on August 3 and anyone from the country and abroad can vote.

After the voting, they will tally the vote and announce the result in presence of the 5-member panel at a suitable event, he said.

When asked about the criteria while selecting the sites, Dr Enamul Haque said it is not a full proof thing as the number of sites could be increased to 25.

The panel has selected the sites considering their architectural, aesthetic and historical values, he added.

Tale of two trafficked girls

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Nine-year-old Moushumi and six-year-old Rabeya alias Rabu could never realise that they were about to fall victim to trafficking when they left their home for an uncertain destination.

With the hope of a better living, the poverty-stricken two kids left their home at Masdair village near BSIC Industrial Area in Narayanganj on June 23.

Their family sources said over two weeks back Moushumi and Rabu went out for playing at noon. But they did not return home during lunch like other days.

Guardians of the two kids searched everywhere for them but in vain.

After 22 days, they got back their kids yesterday thanks to Protection of Children at Risk (PCAR) Project of social services directorate.

Secretary to the Ministry of Social Welfare MA Hai Haoladar handed them over to their guardians at the directorate.

PCAR Divisional Project Coordinator (Dhaka) told The Daily Star that one of the peers of Voluntary Association for Rural Development (VARD), a partner NGO of PCAR in Sylhet, found Moushumi and Rabu at Shibganj Bazar on June 26 when some persons were engaged in bargaining for them.

As the peer approached them for quizzing, they fled the scene.

The peer then brought them to Drop In Centre (DIC) of VARD and after interrogation the officials became sure that the girls were about to fall victim of trafficking.

Moushumi said a person, introducing himself as their uncle at Kamalapur Railway Station, took them to his house and handed them to a woman called Jesmin.

But Moushumi could not tell clearly how they came to Sylhet.

The grandfather of Moushumi said she was left to him by her parents when she was three years old.

"As I am unable to look after her due to old age and financial insolvency, I want her to stay at a Shishu Paribar," he added.

Rabu's mother also wants to keep her youngest daughter at Shishu Paribar as she has to lead a seven-member family alone by working at a garment factory. Rabu's father also left her mother.

When asked, Rabu said Moushumi had told her that they would have good food and money if they go to Dhaka.

"Through this collaboration we hope to be able to work in partnership with doctors in Bangladesh," said Prof Tan Ser Kiat, group chief executive of SingHealth, at a press conference at a city hotel.

Setting up the 'SingHealth-Galaxy' office in Dhaka is aimed at deepening and broadening the existing clinical collaborations between doctors in Bangladesh and those from SingHealth institutions, said the organisers.

He also said that they had selected Bangladesh as the first country where they would launch privilege cards for the patients.

A cardholder would be entitled to various benefits such as discounts for health screening packages and a complimentary sleeper bed for an accompanying relative, he added.

Aga Khan urges Muslims to solve their problems through consensus

The Aga Khan, spiritual leader of Shia Ismaili Muslims, yesterday committed himself to support democratic processes, find means to help ultra-poor and address political and theological tensions through consensus amongst all Muslims.

He was speaking at a ceremony that marked the 50th anniversary of his accession to Ismaili Imamat in the city on Wednesday.

The Aga Khan succeeded his grandfather Sir Sultan Mahomed Shah Aga Khan as the 49th hereditary Imam on July 11, 1957, said a press release.

Speaking about the development of various institutions that constitute the Aga Khan Development Network (AKDN), one of the largest non-profit development networks, the Aga Khan said he is fortunate in having the support of wise men and women from the Ismaili communities throughout the world whose honorary service was a continuum of magnificent and timeless tradition of service.

He highlighted the importance of civil society and its effectiveness towards having a democratic government.

The Aga Khan said, "In many countries of Asia and Africa, democracy is young and still relatively ineffective in supporting modern development activities. A strong civil society can help counter-balance such ineffectiveness."

Turning to present global conflicting situations, the Aga Khan emphasised that Muslims themselves are best suited to address some of the issues facing them.

He called for revitalisation of essential values of Islam, which he felt could only be done through greater collaboration among different interpretations of the faith.

Over 250 leaders of Ismaili community from some 25 countries attended the colourful ceremony.

Errors creep into nat'l identity cards

Sreepur Municipality, Sheikh Abdul Khaleq, while talking to The Daily Star.

Khaleq, along with eight other ward commissioners of the municipality, has been distributing the NIDs among the locals since last month. Once an error is detected on a card, the ward commissioners are also guiding the cardholder how to have the error corrected.

"We are working on the pilot project since June 10," said Abdul Shahid Sarkar, another commissioner of the municipality. "We receive the applications [for correction] and forward those to local army camp."

During a visit to the Sreepur municipality area, this correspondent came across many locals who were collecting their NIDs from the municipality office while some of them went there to have the errors on their cards corrected.

"I was very delighted to get a national identity card, but I was unhappy to see a serious mistake on my card. That's why I came here to request a correction of the mistake," said Mozammel Haque Manzu, a registered voter, at the municipality office.

On Manzu's NID, his father's name is shown as Abdul Jabbar Amena and mother's name as Khatun. Manzu said his mother's full name is Amena Khatun and her first name was mistakenly added to his father's name.

Another voter on the list, Mostafizur, had to make a trip to the municipality office because his NID mistakenly shows his mother's name as Hamida Begum in place of Majida Mahmud.

Locals speculate that errors on a number of NIDs will go uncorrected since many unaware cardholders will never seek to make corrections on their NIDs. Only the ones that are conscious are now visiting the municipality office to have their cards corrected.

The EC put a tremendous effort implementing the much-hyped pilot project that ran from June 10 to June 30 to gather field-level experience of simultaneously preparing the NIDs and an electoral roll containing photographs.

Since the beginning of the project in the Sreepur municipality area, Chief Election Commissioner (CEC) ATM Shamsul Huda and two election commissioners -- Muhammad Sohul Hussein and Brig Gen (ret'd) M Sakhawat Hossain -- visited the area on several occasions to monitor progress of the project.

Army Chief General Moeen U Ahmed also visited the area on the day of launching of the project as Bangladesh army provided technical support and human resources for the project.

A massive publicity campaign was launched with the assistance of local administration and public representatives encouraging locals to take the time to be registered as voters and have their photographs taken by going to voter registration centres.

A huge number of locals registered themselves as voters, 42,716 in total, in response to the campaign that publicised 22 advantages, especially government facilities, for the NID cardholders.

The number of total registered voters now stands at 45,923 as more voters turned up and registered themselves in the last couple of weeks. Till July 12, 35,917 NIDs were prepared and delivered to the municipality for distribution.

"My wife works in Dhaka. I made her come to Sreepur twice, so that her name could be registered in the voter list and she could get an ID card," said Reazuddin, a teacher at a local school.

He however said, "I went to the office of the municipality several times, but I cannot collect my wife's ID card."

When asked about this hassle, the local ward commissioners said they started distributing the NIDs from June 16 and they did not receive all NIDs yet. Besides, the cards are to be handed over only to the original owners.

Safikul Islam, election officer of Sreepur upazila, said people were happy to be registered as voters and to receive their IDs.

MORE EXAMPLES OF ERRORS

Delwara Begum's husband's name is late Abdul Moteleb Khan, but the NID shows that her husband's name is Motalo Khan.

Momtaz Begum's father is Akkas Ali, but in the NID, her father's name is Mohammad Mokles.

Mawlana Anwar Hossain's name appears as Mawlana Amir Hossain on the NID.

Razia Sultana's mother's name is Anwara Begum, but her NID says her mother is Manora Begum.

Mahfoza Begum's name is changed to Firuza Begum on her NID.

Ranuara Begum's husband is Mohammad Arfan Ali, but her card says her husband's name is Arakan Ali.

Name of Masud Reza's mother is Lutfun Nahar, but his ID says his mother's name is Lutfar Nahar.

Farzana Haque's husband on the card is mistakenly showing as Zannatul Ferdous.

Moazzem Hossain's ID says that his father's name is Runa Akhtar.

Rahima's signature appears on Madina Khatun's ID.

Many other errors were also detected on the NIDs including wrong addresses and wrong dates of birth.

Many voters expressed their dissatisfaction over the mistakes and said that they had provided accurate information on the forms prescribed by the enumerators who collected the forms by visiting door-to-door. The voters were even present at voter registration centres during the preparation of the NIDs and the voter roll.

Talking to The Daily Star, Election Commissioner Muhammad Sohul Hussain said some minor mistakes took place due to inefficiency of the enumerators.

The ward commissioners of Sreepur municipality said preparing both the voter roll with photographs and the NIDs at the same time and in a hurry lead to numerous mistakes.

The Sreepur upazila election

Ivory Coast to open mission in Dhaka

BSS, Daoukro, Ivory Coast

Ivory Coast will open a diplomatic mission in Bangladesh once the general elections, scheduled to be held in next January, is over.

"Now our mission in New Delhi works for Bangladesh affairs and the government will try to open an office in Dhaka, the capital of Bangladesh, after the election, as good friendship has been established among us through deployment of Bangladeshi troops as UN peacekeepers", Henri Honan Bedei, former president of Ivory Coast told the Bangladesh delegation yesterday.

The delegation, comprising military officers and media persons and led by Brigadier General M Rafiqul Islam, called on Bedei at his luxurious palace in his village at Daoukro.

Bedei became the president and ruled the country from 1993 to 1999 without much disturbance. But in late 1999, he was overthrown in a bloodless military coup and fled to France. The general, who came to power, was killed in another coup.

Bedei returned home two years back and is now taking preparation to contest in the next election from his Democratic Party of Ivory Coast.

Appreciating the role of Bangladeshi forces, he said, "As part of impartial troops deployed by the United Nations, they (Bangladeshi forces) are doing better and we have good relations with them."
