Barrister Aminul Haque, ex-BNP minister sentenced to a 31-year term yesterday, not only blatantly patronised Islamist militants using the police and administration during the BNP-Jamaat-led coalition government but also barred local authorities in Rajshahi to take action against the militants in 2004-05.

Since the open rise of Bangla Bhai-led militant organisation Jama'atul Mujahideen Bangladesh (JMB) in northern Rajshahi in 2004, The Daily Star in its continuous investigation in the past few years has revealed Aminul's role from the forefront as one of the key patrons of the militants.

Aminul, also former lawmaker of Rishahi-1 constituency, and Ruhul Kuddus Talukder Dulu, former lawmaker of Natore-2 and former deputy minister for land, jointly patronised the JMB in the region.

Dulu was sentenced to eight years imprisonment yesterday in an arson case.

Dulu and Aminul also talked Rajshahi Mayor Mizanur Rahman Minu, fellow MPs Nadim Mostafa of Rajshahi-4 and Alamgir Kabir of Naogaon-6 into their JMB game.

The militant patrons made it mandatory for all to send public and private jeeps, cars, minibuses and motorcycles to the processions of Siddiqui Islam alias Bangla Bhai. Police cars would stay within 500-1000 yards of the operation area to back up Bangla Bhai and officers-in-charge of different police stations were also compelled to be there.

CEC hopes restructuring of political parties would be complete by that time

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Chief Election Commissioner (CEC) ATM Shamsul Huda yesterday said the Election Commission (EC) will definitely start holding talks with the political parties on electoral issues in September and hoped restructuring of the parties might be completed by this time.

"An atmosphere is definitely required for holding talks with the political parties. We must be able to talk with them in September and an end result will come from the ongoing restructuring of the parties," the CEC said in a press briefing.

The EC had planned to hold dialogue with the political parties in last April, but it could not proceed with the plan due to the indefinite ban on indoor politics since March

More areas go under flood waters

STAR REPORT

The flood situation across the country worsened yesterday as heavy rain continued raising the water level in almost all the major rivers including the Jamuna and Padma.

In the next couple of days, it is likely to take a more alarming turn in the districts adjacent to the rivers.

Many fresh areas went under water forcing more and more people to leave their houses and herd themselves to a higher ground. Ferry service on Aricha-Nagarbari route remained snapped due to floods.

Collapse of levees in some districts including Sirajganj and river erosion in Bogra have also contributed to inundation of new areas.

According to Flood and Forecasting and Warning Centre (FFWC), the Brahmaputra and Jamuna continued rising at all points and were flowing over danger level at Sirajganj and Aricha.

Low-lying areas in Gaibandha, Bogra, Jamalpur, Sirajganj, Pabna and Tangail are likely to go under water by the next 24 to 72 hours, it said.

The Ganges-Padma too kept rising at all points and was flowing 30 cm and 11 cm above danger level at Goalunda and Bhagyakul, threatening to submerge areas in Manikganj, Munshiganj, Faridpur, Rajbari, Madaripur, Shariatpur districts and
