Bangladesh can become middle income country by 2016, says WB

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Bangladesh can develop into a middle-income country (MIC) by 2016 if it liberalise trade further, increase energy prices, privatise selected state-owned enterprises and maintain its past record of economic stability, says a World Bank (WB) study released yesterday.

Speaking at the launch of the study titled "Bangladesh: Strategy for sustained growth," Finance Adviser Mirza Azizul Islam agreed with the recommendations made by the study and said that the government is already implementing a number of them out of its own compulsion.

Azizul, however, also outlined a number of possible fallout from implementing these recommendations, ranging from greater unemployment and financial and food insecurity for the vulnerable groups.

The finance adviser said that it is a mere coincidence that government and WB policies have converged and this does not mean that the government has surrendered its economic policies to the institution.

Commenting on the study, WB Country Director Xian Zhu said, "If GDP growth picks up to a sustained rate of 7.5 percent, Bangladesh can become a middle-income group by 2016."

"But, if average growth fails to the 3 percent rate seen in the 1980s, the middle-income aspiration will have to wait for another five decades," he cautioned.

The study found that Bangladesh can achieve rapid growth by shifting from agriculture to labour-intensive manufacturing, deepening integration with international markets and unleashing the growth potential for major urban centres, especially Dhaka.

50 Iraq football fans killed in car bombs

Insurgents kill 10 policemen

AFP, Baghdad/ Hilla

The death toll from two car bomb attacks on Iraqi football fans celebrating their side's Asian Cup semi-final win has risen at least 50 dead and 90 wounded, according to the US military yesterday.

Iraq's dramatic penalty shoot-out victory against South Korea on Wednesday sent thousands of jubilant fans cheering into the streets of Baghdad waving flags, singing and firing rifles wildly into the air.

While the majority of Iraqis from across the country's warring communities hailed the victory and enjoyed a rare moment of shared national joy, insurgent car bombers detonated two devices among the crowds.

A spokeswoman for the US division deployed in Baghdad, Captain Dawn Williams, said 50 Iraqi civilians and one policeman were killed in the blasts, 90 people were wounded and 18 vehicles destroyed.

Medics at the capital's Kindi, Yarmuk and Ibn Nafees hospitals reported treating 126 wounded from the attacks in the western Mansour and central Zayuna districts, along with two deaths from stray bullets.

Some of the bodies may have been removed from the scene directly, and Iraqi security officials gave higher estimated tolls. An interior ministry official said 58 people were killed, while a defence source said 53.

It was not clear who planted the bombs, but similar attacks have in the past been blamed on Sun insurgent groups such as Al-Qaeda's Iraqi affiliate, which kills to spread chaos and undermine the US-backed government.

Meanwhile, ten members of Iraq's security forces were killed yesterday, including five police

Go back home, get new job permit

South Korea urges irregular Bangladeshi workers

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

South Korea has urged the irregular Bangladeshi workers there to return home voluntarily so that they can take advantage of Employment Permit System (EPS), a new recruitment plan for the foreign workers with better facilities.

"We urge the workers who overstayed or violated their contracts to come back home voluntarily. They will get the chance to re-enter Korea, but if they are caught by the Korean authorities, they will not be allowed ever," South Korean Ambassador in Bangladesh Suk-Bum Park said yesterday.

He talked to The Daily Star on the sidelines of an orientation programme organised by Bangladesh Overseas Employment Services Limited (BOESL) at its auditorium where a Korean delegation talked about the newly introduced EPS programme in front of the job seekers in Korea.

There are nearly 12,000 Bangladeshi workers in Korea at present, although the country stopped hiring workers from Bangladesh four years back following widespread allegations that the recruiting agencies in Bangladesh charge too high for the migration of the workers.

The Korean ambassador observed that since the Bangladeshi workers had to pay a huge amount to get to Korea, they
