Ferdousy Priyabhashini's solo exhibition

Jalsiri Naditir Parey (top) and Ashwathitho Bot-er Path-e by Ferdousy Priyabhashini

FAYZA HAQ

Ferdousy Priyabhashini's ongoing solo exhibition of driftwood at Bengal Gallery brings in humour, love, happiness and sorrow. In the exhibition titled Branches and Twigs, the artist's works with discarded objects like tree roots, branches, trunks, coconut fibre and grass, are on display. Initially encouraged by maestro S.M. Sultan, Ferdousy has worked diligently and come a long way in 27 years. Commenting on her work S.M. Sultan had said in 1994, "The purity of form that Henry Moore sought in stones, Ferdousy has found it in trees". Poet Sufia Kamal once wrote, "Ferdousy inspires awe and admiration by discovering and communicating splendours in driftwood, cinders and dry grass."

Ferdousy, from her childhood was fond of nature and believes that man is an inseparable part of it. In her moments of distress and and unwanted.

The artist picks up driftwood from the streets, from disposals and from homes, which she happens to visit. She used to clean the wood by boiling it in salt water. She later found this laborious and resorted to applying chemicals to the wood, a technique she learnt from Sharbiri Rai Chowdhury in Shantiniketan and Masuda Kazi. She also seasons her material by exposing it to the rain and sun for some time. According to the artist, she learnt this method from renowned naturalist photographer Enamul Haque. Ferdousy's creations find encouragement from artists like Shafuddin Ahmed, Qayyum Chowdhury, Rafique Nabi and Abulhas Shukoor.

From the fibre of palm tree leaves, Ferdousy gets astounding results in the form of birds caught in the rain. She rubbed it with grease to give it a brass-like shine. She added sand, lime and gum to the background to give it the grecreepers. The brown shades came naturally from rain and sun. Black frame the composition the effect of a waiting person in the window and this piece is titled Storm in the Window. Dwelling on her early life she has created a front door, nut fibres and thin strips form three entrance wicker fence. Another scene from the front of a prison with handles.

Yet another creation the goddess of rain and female figure walking through torrents. In the entry, but temple, one finds a dam amidst the ruins created wood. Song of Restful 1 origins in a banyan tree and his companions are twisting and dancing torsos and limbs into mysterious forms.
