

Letting pictures do the talking

KARIM WAHEED

ON the occasion of World Photography Day (August 19), Drik Gallery arranged a photographic presentation, featuring dynamic, edgy works of Abir Abdullah, Andrew Biraj and Munem Wasif.

In an informal setting, photographers and photo-enthusiasts huddled during the presentation and discussed the images. Renowned photographers Golam Mostafa and Bijon Sarkar attended the event as well.

The presentation began with Munem Wasif's series on Bangladeshi jute mills that are on the verge of extinction.

Following the prescription of the World Bank and other donors, state-owned jute mills -- once a thriving industry -- have become ghosts of their former selves. It's easier to shut down factories that are not making any money. But for every factory that goes belly up, thousands of workers and their families are left in panic, wondering where their next meal will come from. Many employees have not been paid in months.

According to Wasif, "I know I cannot ease their situation but I wanted to bring to light what these people are going through, hoping their stories will hit our collective conscience."

Wasif, who considers himself a 'documentary photographer', is a graduate of Pathshala -- the South Asian Institute of Photography. He now works with DrikNEWS (International news photo agency) as a staff photographer. His photographs have been published in numerous national and international publications including Le Monde, Himal Southasian, Asian Geographic, Issue Magazine, Zonezero, Forum, The Daily Star, New Age and Daily Shomokal. He won an "Honourable Mention" in the 2007 All Roads Photography Program by the National Geographic Society, 1st Prize in the Konkurs Fotografii Prasowej, and 2nd Prize in the 2007 Polish BZ WBK Press Photo Contest for his extensive work on tea garden workers.

Abir Abdullah's series on the recent flood was next.

An elderly woman throws a blank look to the heavens. A mother crouches on her bed, holding her child tight; all her belongings, even the clay stove, piled next to her. People, not wading, but swimming with all their earthly possessions. A corpse is left covered on a boat; death came in the form of a submerged electric pole. A woman, visibly in pain, at ICDDR,B. No captions needed.

Abdullah completed his Diploma in Photojournalism from Pathshala in 1999 and worked as a staff photographer at Drik Picture Library from 1996 to 2005. He joined European Press Photo Agency (EPA) as a Bangladesh correspondent in 2005. Currently, he is a tutor at Pathshala. Abdullah won 1st prize at the WHO photo contest in Switzerland (2002), 3rd place in the Gordon Parks photo contest in USA (2002), 2nd prize at Unicef Photographer of the year contest (2004) and more.

Andrew Biraj's presentation titled "State Excluded" covers Biharis living in the Geneva Camp in Mohammadpur.

Predecessors of the residents of Geneva Camp or camps outside Dhaka migrated to Bangladesh from Bihar, India during the decades following the partition in 1947. They speak Urdu; have a unique culture. Their role during the Liberation War sided them with the Pakistanis. Following the Liberation of Bangladesh, they were rendered "stateless" or "refugees". Pakistan does not want them and Bangladeshis mostly resent them. Cramped in shanties, often devoid of basic facilities like running water or indoor plumbing, their children consider education as "luxury". These are people who have integrated into the mainstream society, like the man cutting your hair or cooking your kebab; yet remain alienated.

Biraj just narrates their story, does not put labels.

Andrew Biraj completed a basic course in photography from Pathshala in 1999. In 2004 he received a scholarship from the University of Bolton, UK, where he did his B.A in Photography. His works featuring political brutality in Bangladesh have earned him wide acclaim. He focuses on people living on the fringes of society. He has won Bronze prize in the 3rd China International Press Photo Contest in 2007. His editorial works have been published in The Guardian, The Observer Magazine, Photo File, New Age and The Daily Star.

World Photography Day celebrated

Shilpakala plans to open Department of Photography

ERSHAD KAMOL

The World Photography Day is celebrated on August 19, marking the date when the first announcement of photography was made in 1839. In observance of the day, Bangladesh Shilpakala Academy (BSA) arranged a programme at the National Art Gallery.

Eminent photo-artist Dr. Nowazesh Ahmed was the chief guest at the programme and photo-journalist Nasir Ali Mamun was the special guest. The discussion was presided over by A.B.M. Abdul Howk Chowdhury, secretary, Ministry of Cultural Affairs. Director General of BSA Quamrul Hassan, ndc, and photo-artist Golam Mostafa also delivered speeches. Director of the Department of Fine Arts, Nazrul Haque delivered the welcome speech.

In his speech Nazrul Haque focused on the endeavours taken by BSA in the field of photography.

Emphasising on the role of photographers in the country, Golam Mostafa said, "In the last two decades, the photographers of Bangladesh have won over 900 prestigious awards, competing at international events. Photography, these days, is a recognised art form. However, in Bangladesh 'photo-artists' still do not get their due."

Announcing the plan of setting up a photography department, Director General of BSA Quamrul Hassan, ndc, said, "A proposal for establishing a Department of Photography at BSA was introduced in 1989. However, nothing was finalised. We hope to establish the department in a couple of months. We will place the issue in the next Jatiyo Parishad -- the decision making body of BSA--meeting."

Photo-artist Nasir Ali Mamun said, "We hope the BSA goes ahead with its plan of establishing a photography department. We also hope that the government will set up an institute of Photography."

Hoping for better days for the photo-artists, Dr. Nowazesh Ahmed said, "Our photo-artists have made some remarkable achievements in the international arena. If we receive support from the government, we can do even better."

Secretary of Ministry of Cultural Affairs A.B.M. Abdul Howk Chowdhury, who is also the vice president of Jatiyo Parishod of BSA, announced, "If everything goes smoothly we will set up the Pakistani junta and more. The BSA collection also includes rare photographs of Rabindranath Tagore, Kazi Nazrul Islam, Bangabondhu Sheikh Mujibur Rahman, Moulana Abdul Hamid Khan Bhashani, President Ziaur Rahman and others.

Portraits of different local and migratory birds by Rafiqul Islam are also on display. The main attraction of the exhibition are the photographs by Dr. Nowazesh Ahmed. Capturing the contrast of light and shadow, Nowazesh has presented images of simple things. The aes-

Dr. Nowazesh Ahmed describes his photographs to ABM Abdul Howk Chowdhury proposed Department of Photography shortly.

At the venue, a weeklong photography exhibition was opened by A.B.M. Abdul Howk Chowdhury. Sixty photographs including 20 from BSA collection, 20 by Dr. Nowazesh Ahmed 18 by Rafiqul Islam and two by Enam Talukdar are on display.

Photographs from BSA collection feature historic moments including the Language Movement, valiant Freedom Fighters, the genocide carried out by the thetically rich photos are like paintings, yet more vibrant. A unique combination of art and techniques is evident in his collage, which portrays a famine and a war behind a girl's visage. Another interesting moment captured in Nowazesh's frame is a famine scene in 1974, which features a distressed, starved boy looking for food in empty dekchi (pot). Beauty of rivers and landscapes have also been presented uniquely in Dr. Nowazesh Ahmed's photos.
