'Raise awareness to end discrimination against Dalit'

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Speakers at a seminar yesterday called on the government, NGOs and civil society members to raise awareness in order to eliminate discrimination against Dalit people from society.

Caste-based discrimination still prevails in the country, they said, adding that it would not be possible for the nation to achieve real development ignoring the Dalit people.

Bangladesh Dalits Human Rights (BDHR) and Nagrik Udyog jointly organised the seminar titled 'The situation of Dalit in Bangladesh: Possible way Forward' at the National Press Club in the city.

"The word 'Dalit' means poor and oppressed person in society. There are around 17 crore Dalit people in India, 45 lakh in Nepal and 14 lakh in Pakistan. In Bangladesh, over 55 lakh Dalit people live under marginal conditions and no government has taken effective measures to remove the social stigma against them," he said in his keynote paper.

Prof Iftekhar also said over 60 percent of Dalit people are deprived of education and other basic rights. Human rights activist Dr Hamida

Hossain called for launching mass awareness campaign to stamp out all forms of discrimination against Dalit people and ensure equal rights for all.
