Prices of Iftar items becoming dear

DWAIPAYAN BARUA

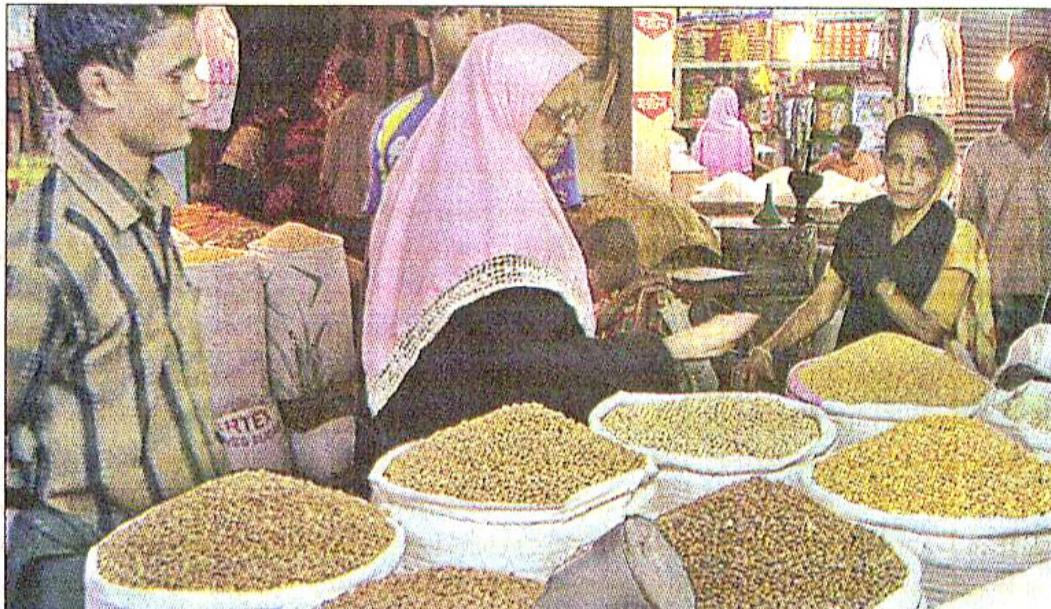

The prices of essentials have begun to shoot up in the port city ahead of the holy month of Ramadan, worrying the low and middle class people.

"Every year it happens just a week or two before the Ramadan and there is no exception this year as well," said Mohammad Munir, a primary schoolteacher who was shopping for Iftar items at Reazuddin Bazar on Saturday.

Prices of Iftar items like chickpea (chhola), white pea (motor), khesari (one kind of pulse), onion, duri peas and dates have already gone up in kitchen markets.

But the prices of several items have reduced remarkably in the wholesale market, said the wholesale traders.

They said though these commodities, widely used during this holy month in particular, are abundant in the market their prices have increased.

Shoppers at kitchen markets during last three days buying items for Iftar and Sehri found prices unusually high.

Chickpea, imported from Australia, vastly consumed during the Ramadan was sold at Tk 66 to Tk 68 per kg at Reazuddin Bazar on Sunday, which was Tk 63 a week ago.

The price was Tk 59 per kg a month ago, showed a statistics at the district marketing office.

However, chickpea was sold at a reduced price of Tk 56.27 per kg in the wholesale market at Khatunganj the same day while it was Tk 58.15 last week.

The wholesale rate of different quality of chickpea has already decreased by around Tk 2 per kilogram in last three days, said Ahmad Rashid Amu, proprietor of M/s Abdus Salam Sandwagar and also the General Secretary of Chittagong Dal (pulse) Mill Traders Association, while talking to this correspondent.

Like chickpea another necessary item for Iftar, khesari -- used to prepare 'piazzoo' -- was sold at Tk 29.74 per kg at wholesale market while the price was Tk 30.81 last week, sources said.

But the retailers at different city markets were selling khesari at Tk 34.

"The sale is not up to the mark compared to previous years as buyers from outside the city are yet to come, forcing the whole-salers to sell their goods in reduced rates," said Md Jamal Hossain, General Secretary of Chakta Industries and Traders' Association.

The retailers, however, could not show any reason for the price hike.

Onion was being sold in retail markets at Tk 33 to Tk 34 per kg at Karmaphuli Market, Reazuddin Bazar and Bakshirhat while it was only Tk 28 to Tk 30 five to six days ago.

The prices of quality dates, imported from Saudi Arabia, marked a sharp rise to reach Tk 80 to Tk 100 while it was Tk 60 ten days ago.

Rasel Anwar, a shopper at Reazuddin Bazar, said the prices of dates might increase more within a few days.

Besides, prices of different items varied at different markets in the port city. Essential items like ginger were being sold at Tk 44 to Tk 45 per kg at Reazuddin Bazar while it was Tk 50 to Tk 52 at Karmaphuli Market.

Several traders and common people at city markets said a section of traders are now busy in making profit targeting the holymonth.

"They wait for the opportunity to cash in on the holy month of self-restraint," said Mahbuba Abida, a housewife.

Farida Begum, also a housewife, said she might have to curtail her Iftar menu this year due to price hike of essentials that she experienced throughout the year.

She urged the district administration as well as Chittagong City Corporation to regulate the market situation in order to keep the prices of commodities especially used in Ramadan at reasonable level.

'91 cyclonic storm still haunts coastal people

Call for construction of more cyclone shelters and repair of existing ones

NUR UDDIN ALAMGIR

An inadequate number of cyclone shelters, poor maintenance of the existing ones and lack of plan for setting up new shelters remain a matter of grave concern for the people of the coastal belt in Chittagong.

The existing shelters, mostly set up after 1991 cyclonic storm and several are before the War of Liberation, lie in a miserable state and face manifold problems, sources at District Relief and Rehabilitation Officer (DRRO) in Chittagong said.

With 50 per cent of the around 400 shelters requiring more or less repair work, the people fear large scale of devastation and casualties if the cyclonic storm lashes the coastal areas like that of April 29, 1991.

But, the authorities concerned appear quite indifferent to the safety of the people who frequently witness loss of lives and properties during natural calamities like flood, cyclone and tidal upsurge.

Most of the cyclone shelters were constructed by the Local Government Engineering Department (LGED), Public Works Department (PWD) and Education Engineering Department while some others set up with the financial assistance of Japan, Kuwait and Saudi Arabia.

The shelters have turned into a safe haven for the criminals and the drug peddlers at nighttime while they are being used as schools in the daytime.

Around 64 shelters, out of 90, at the offshore upazila of Sandwip are in a vulnerable condition and require immediate repair for keeping them usable for the people of the highly disaster-prone area. Ziaur Rahman, Project Implementation Officer (PIO) of Sandwip, said around one lakh people, mostly fishermen and other lower class people, depend on the centres during any natural calamity. He said most of the doors and the windows of these shelters are worn out.

There is a PIO in every upazila for management of the cyclone shelters under the Ministry for Food and Disaster Management.

Mansur-E-Alam, an office assistant of Sitakunda PIO Office, said some of the centres were constructed in 1990 while others before 1965.

"Twenty to 25 per cent of some 3.34 lakh people living in 10 unions under the upazila depend on 57 shelters during any natural disaster here," Alam said.

PIO Mohammad Sattar Ali of Anwara said 40, out of 60 shelters, need repair so badly while number of the shelters is inadequate for some 1.5 lakh people in the disaster-prone coastal upazila with a population of 3 lakh.

"Several unions in the coastal belt like Roypur, Barkhine and Barashat need more centres as the existing ones can hardly provide them with shelter," Sattar said.

Mohammad Ruhul Amin, DRRO in Chittagong, admitting the inadequacy of shelters and miserable condition of the existing ones, said they have sent a proposal to the Ministry of Food and Disaster Management in this regard in June.

"In the proposal we have recommended for repairing the dilapidated centres and constructing new centres," Ruhul Amin added.

The road in Kadamtali area in the port city lies in a dilapidated condition due to excessive rain, posing danger to the passengers as well as the pedestrians, but the authorities remain indifferent.
