ED is knocking on our doors and so shopping has become a necessity. There is good news for every shopaholic especially those who love buying shoes; the shopping centers have a commendable variety of shoes for Eid.

Ladies who love flats or heels, stoned-fitted, embroidered or plain can get them all. The stone-fitted ones are a bit pricey but they look absolutely gorgeous and are worth the buy. If the budget is between Tk300 to Tk1000, you can get amazing shoes to go with your Eid outfit! Flats are very "in" nowadays; with a bit of glitter lace or stone fitted they look just perfect on your feet. You can look in stores like Etcetra, Bata, Aarong, and Rakhee Shoes, or in the shopping centers in Gulshan-1, AR Plaza (Dhanmondi) and the other new malls.

The men's shoe collection also looks good even though it's hard to find variety. But shoe stores like Hera Leather Shoes (Pink City) Bata, Aarong or Rakhee Shoes

Talking Feet

DOROTHY had a magical red pair that protected her and led her back home. Cinderella's glass ones won her a Prince Charming. Imelda Marcos raised eyebrows with her enormous collection, while Carrie Bradshaw can't get enough of them. That's right; shoes are more than just a fashion accessory. They protect our feet, support us in our various activities, and complete an outfit. They also reflect on our personalities.

Try this the next time you're sitting in a hospital waiting room, or an airport terminal, or any place where there's a lot of people and you have nothing better to do. Look at their shoes; see what they tell you. If you observe closely enough (and of course, take in the rest of the person's outfit into consideration before making the final inference), you'll be amazed at how close your guesses are to the truth. Your shoes speak volumes about your personality. Curious as to how people judge you by your shoes? Read on for personality traits associated with shoe types.

Loafers, sandals or ballet flats

THE key word for these shoe types is 'comfort'. Characterised by flat heels, toe room, and breathing space for feet, they're perfect for those who do a lot of walking, and like to treat their feet well. If you wear a lot of these shoes, you convey the impression of someone who prefers comfort over trends.

Your appreciation for comfort shows not only that you are probably a very sensitive person, but that you have an ability to make others feel comfortable as well. Practical, logical and sensible, you have a sense of perspective that many would kill to have, and without even trying you can put others at ease with your comforting ways.

While convenience rates higher for these shoes, they're by no means lacking in style. Flirty sandals will go with any shalwar kameez set, loafers look great with jeans and kurtis, and ballet flats can be teamed up with just about anything.

Mules

ESSENTIALLY a backless shoe, the mule is elegant, classy, and always stylish. Wear them often, and you make a great first impression, and leave an even greater one once people get to know you and your appreciation for detail. It reflects on an attention to quality and classic design, and your ability to easily pull things together leaves you appearing calm, cool and collected. Whether or not you believe it to be true, others see you as organised, worldly, and prepared for anything. Your innate sense of style and your sophisticated manner makes you the envy of many.

Mules with thicker heels can be teamed with kameez sets, or slacks, and even mid-length skirts; save the skinnier heels for saris.
