

Prospective Chilahati land port yet to be opened as red-tapism stands in the way

EAM ASADUZZAMAN, Nilphamari

Bordering Chilahati town in Nilphamari district is yet to be declared as land port despite assurance from and initiative by authorities on different occasions.

Situated at a suitable geographical position for running multinational business, the area has all infrastructural facilities including road and rail communication with different parts of the country. Especially, direct rail link with Khulna near Mongla port makes it a cost-effective and feasible one.

There are good power supply facilities, modern telephone exchange, two commercial bank branches, a BDR camp, a police station, a 'dak banglo' (government guest house) and a government college at Chilahati.

Declaration of Chilahati as a land port and reopening of Chilahati-Holdibari rail route would facilitate Bangladeshi traders' export and import business with 'seven-sisters' states of north-east India where there is good demand for Bangladeshi goods. The Indian exporters and importers of Shiliguri and Darjeeling also want Chilahati land port.

Some 200 exporters and importers in the district, who use land ports in other districts, have to bear 30%-40% additional carrying cost.

Nepal and Bhutan are also interested to use Mongla port of Bangladesh for their international trade, traders in the district said.

The distance between Chilahati and Kakorvita, a bordering business town of Nepal, via Holdibari and Shiliguri of India is only 95km while the distance between Chilahati and Funt Soling, a business town of Bhutan, via Holdibari, Shiliguri and Joiga of India is 180km.

Chilahati-Khulna rail route can help the two countries to transport their goods up to Mongla port at cheaper cost and shorter time.

Nathula mountain pass, a newly constructed route aimed at boosting trade between India and China, can also be used by Bangladesh to enhance trade with China as the distance between Chilahati and Nathala of China is about 250km. It is the shortest distance for trading between Bangladesh and China.

The opening of Chilahati land

A train waits at the country's northernmost bordering railway station at Chilahati. Development of 11.34km of railway in Bangladesh and Indian parts would help boost regional trade.

port will help to accelerate economic activities among the Saarc countries, Abu Musa, convenor of Chilahati land port implementation committee, said.

Nilphamari Chamber of Commerce and Industry President Sohel Parvez said Chilahati land port can contribute a new life to Uttara EPZ as the EPZ products might get new market in India, Nepal, Bhutan and even China. Besides, new employment opportunity could help to solve monga in the region.

A land custom and traffic office near rail station was set up in 1953 for incoming and outgoing passengers and goods. It was in operation till June 28, 2002. Government employees are still attending those offices without any work.

National Board of Revenue in July 2006 declared Chilahati as a land port revenue station and requested the secretary of navigation ministry to declare it as land port, said several exporters and importers of the district.

Representatives of Nilphamari Chamber of Commerce and Industry during their separate meetings with commerce secretary Sohel Ahmed and the then commerce adviser Barkatulla Bulu in last year got assurance to declare Chilahati as a land port as early as possible, they said.

Nilphamari chamber President Sohel Parvez told this correspondent that the then navigation minister Akbar Hossain told parliament on June 9, 2004 that the work to develop six land ports of the country including Chilahati would come to end soon. Sohel alleged that the work is yet to be started let alone its completion.

The distance between Chilahati rail station of Bangladesh and Holdibari rail station in India is 13.34km. Of which Bangladesh has 8.10km and India 3.24km.

From British era up to mid 60s of the last century the famous 'Darjeeling mail' train used to run between Darjeeling and Kolkata via Chilahati and Holdibari.

Big railway godowns built by the British ruler to preserve unloaded goods from trains are still seen in Chilahati. The 'Merchants association of Chilahati' was the biggest business organisation in the then Rangpur and Dinajpur.

After the inauguration of Bangabandhu bridge across the Jamuna, the then Awami League government decided to declare Chilahati a land port. Tk 4.5 crore was sanctioned to repair the 8.10km rail line inside Bangladesh to re-open Chilahati-Holdibari rail route. But the work did not even start.

Spectacular Eliot Bridge built over a century ago is one of the tourist spots in Sirajganj town.

Eliot Bridge attracts tourists in Sirajganj

GOLAM MOSTAFA JIBON, Sirajganj

Eliot Bridge, a glorious heritage of the district town, still attracts thousands of tourists from home and abroad.

Built over the Baral in the middle of the town during the British rule, the bridge has no pillar. Popularly known as 'Boropul', the bridge connects the eastern part of the town with its western part. The bridge stands as a witness to many important events of the this sub-continent.

The western bank of the Baral was under the jurisdiction of the then Jaminder Siraj Ali Chowdhury. He realised the importance of the place and established a river port in 1808. Later, the area was named as Sirajganj after the Jaminder.

In 1869, Sirajganj municipality was established and later a police station was set up. In 1866, it was upgraded to a sub-divisional town and later a district town in 1984.

In the 18th century, boats and steamers were found to move through the Baral. In absence of railway, goods laden water vessels plied to Assam and other parts of West Bengal through Sirajganj. Trade and business flourished on both banks of the river.

In 1892, Bitsonbell, a Briton became the sub-divisional officer (SDO) of Sirajganj. Later, he became the governor of Bengal and Assam.

One day he was returning home from the western bank. All on a sudden, he heard a groaning sound of a poor man. The man bought food from his day-long earnings. As he had no single paisa, the boatman was not allowing him to get on board his boat. Observing his plight, Bitsonbell helped the man cross the river. After this event, Bell decided to build a bridge across the Baral. He formed a committee consisting of businessmen of the town. They contributed generously at its fund and the District Board granted Tk 1,500.

Sir Charles Eliot, the then government of Bengal and Assam laid the foundation of the 180 feet long and 16 feet wide bridge named after him on August 6, 1882.

Stuart Hardland, a British firm constructed the pillarless bridge at a cost of Tk 45,000.

The bridge was repaired during the immediate past BNP-led alliance regime.

Victim family demands protection from land grabbers

RU Correspondent

Members of a victim family from Dighol village in Ullapara of Sirajganj yesterday demanded immediate withdrawal of 'false cases' filed by a land grabber.

At a press conference at Rajshahi Metropolitan Press Club, the victim family alleged that the land grabbers, an influential NGO director and his associates, are using political influence to capture their land.

"Rezaul Karim Bachchu, executive director of 'OREDAR' NGO, started his conspiracy against our family when we refused to allow over our house an electric line that would connect to his house," Asma Begum, a teacher of Ullapara Government Primary School, said at the press conference.

Bachchu wanted the electric wire over their house to save cost, she said, adding, 'As an act of vengeance, Bachchu and his relatives filed a false case against my husband Abdul Bari, his brother Abdul Baki and sister's husband Rakibul Islam on August 6, 2007.'

"Bachchu's associate Idrish Ali filed another false case with Sirajganj court accusing my husband and Rakibul Islam on August 12."

"Later Bachchu grabbed our 29 decimal land by preparing a false document.

"Bachchu also demanded Tk 2 lakh as toll for withdrawal of the two cases against us and threatened my father-in-law for vacating rest of his land."

"Following the threat, we filed a general diary (GD) with Ullapara Police Station on August 14, seeking protection."

"But police did not take any action against land grabber Bachchu," Asma said.

She showed documents and copies of court orders supporting their ownership of the land.

"Bachchu forced us to vacate our Dighol village houses by threatening to get my husband, who is a superintendent of Borokaliber Dhakil Madrasa in Ullapara, arrested by police and brand him as a militant."

Asma and her family members demanded immediate arrest and exemplary punishment of the land grabber to save the family.

Asma's husband Abdul Bari, his brother Abdul Baki, Asma's father Humzum Ali Khan and his relative Shahinur Rahman were present at the press conference.

When contacted over telephone, Rezaul Karim Bachchu, executive director of 'OREDAR', said the allegations against him were not true and he was not involved in the land-grabbing act.
