AP, Beirut

Lebanese troops opened fire yesterday on Israeli warplanes flying low over southern Lebanon but no hits were reported, Lebanese officials said.

Israeli warplanes frequently fly over Lebanese airspace in what Israel says are reconnaissance missions, but this was the first time the army has on the aircraft since an Aug. 14, 2006 cease-fire ended a monthlong war between Israeli and Hezbollah guerrillas.

Lebanese soldiers opened up with machine guns and light anti-aircraft weapons mounted on armored vehicles at two planes that flew by just east of Marjayoun town near the border at mid-morning, a Lebanese security official said. A total of 150 rounds were fired, he added.

US slaps sanctions on Iran military, banks

AFP, Washington

The United States yesterday slapped tough sanctions on Iran's military and three state-owned banks, ratcheting up tensions over its nuclear drive and seeking to choke off funds to Tehran.

"These actions will help to protect the international financial system from the illicit activities of the Iranian government," US Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice told reporters.

"They will provide a powerful deterrent to every international bank and company that thinks of doing business with the Iranian government."

The sanctions target Iran's elite Quds Force, accused by the US of being a supporter of terrorism, as well as the country's Revolutionary Guards, said to be a proliferator of weapons of mass destruction.

Some 22 Iranian government agencies, three state-owned banks and individuals are also being blacklisted as the United States steps up a drive to squeeze Iran out of the international banking system.

The move is the latest by the US administration to step up pressure on Iran, which it accuses of fomenting global terrorism, supporting insurgents in Iraq and working to develop an atomic bomb.

Rice, who on Wednesday said that Iran and its suspect nuclear programme posed the single greatest challenge to US security, reiterated the United States was committed to resolving the crisis through diplomatic means.

But she warned: "If they choose to continue down a path of confrontation, the US will act with the international community to resist these threats of the Iranian regime."

There was no immediate reaction from the Iranian foreign ministry, but a leading Iranian MP immediately dismissed the new sanctions as a "strategic mistake."

Olmert dampens expectations of Abbas meeting

AP, Jerusalem

Prime Minister Ehud Olmert on Thursday played down expectations for an upcoming US-sponsored peace summit, saying the gathering would not produce a binding peace agreement with the Palestinians and might not even take place.

Speaking to a group of Jewish fundraisers, Olmert said he is committed to making the conference a success and said he would meet Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas on Friday to review preparations. The summit is expected to take place later this year in Annapolis, Md.

"If all goes well, hopefully, we will meet in Annapolis," he said. "(But) Annapolis is not made to be the event for the declaration of peace."

Over 755,000 on US terrorist watch list

AFP, Washington

The US terrorist watch list includes more than 755,000 names and continues to grow, the US Government Accountability Office said Wednesday.

The list exploded from fewer than 20 entries before the September 11, 2001 attacks to more than 150,000 just a few months later, after the Terrorist Screening Centre (TSC) was created in December 2003 to keep tabs on terrorist suspects, according to the GAO, the non-partisan investigative arm of Congress.

Including known pseudonyms of suspects, the list's 755,000 names as of May 2007 represents, in fact, around 300,000 people, according to TSC estimates.

Tasked with gathering data on individuals "known or appropriately suspected to be or have been engaged in conduct constituting, in preparation for, in aid of or related to terrorism," the TSC gets its information from Federal Bureau of Investigation intelligence and passes it on chiefly to immigration authorities.

Since 2003, the list has been used around 53,000 times to single out individuals for possible arrest or to prevent them from entering the country, the GAO said.

Students of Istanbul University chant slogans against the Kurdistan Worker's Party (PKK) and Iraq as they hold national Turkish flags during a protest in Istanbul yesterday. Turkish President Abdullah Gul said on Wednesday his country was "running out of patience" with Iraq over Kurd rebels there and would "purge" bases across the border.

Iraqi delegation to visit Turkey

AP, Cizre

Turkey is running out of patience and will not tolerate the use of Iraqi soil for the purpose of launching terrorist activities, the Turkish president said yesterday ahead of a visit from high-level Iraqi delegation.

Turkey has threatened to stage an incursion into northern Iraq if Iraqi Kurds and US-led coalition forces do not crack down on Kurdish rebels.

"We are totally determined to take all the necessary steps to end this threat," President Abdullah Gul said in a speech opening the Black Sea Economic Cooperation Organisation foreign ministers' meeting in Ankara.

The high-level Iraqi delegation was expected to visit Ankara on Thursday after Turkey's top leadership recommended the government take economic measures to force Iraqi cooperation against Kurdish rebels and Turkey considered a possible military cross-border offensive.

On Wednesday, Turkish warplanes reportedly pounded rebel positions along the border. An AP Television News cameraman standing at the Habur border crossing on Thursday saw a pair of warplanes flying from northern Iraq back into Turkey. It was not clear whether the planes were on a reconnaissance mission.

Several F-16 warplanes were seen taking off from an air base in the southeastern city of Diyarbakir earlier Thursday, local reporters said.

A Kurdish rebel ambush near the border killed 12 soldiers on Sunday. Eight soldiers have been missing since then; the rebels say they are holding them and have distributed photographs and video footage.

The Iraqi delegation visiting Thursday will be headed by the Defence Minister Abdul-Qader al-Obeidi and will include Minister of State for National Security Sherwan al-Waili, said Yassin Majid, an adviser to Iraqi Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki.

"It will discuss all issues between the two countries. The political choice will be the first solution to solve the crisis. The Iraqi government insists on dialogue and cooperation to solve the crisis," Majid said.
