

14TH DHAKA BOOK FAIR 2007 INAUGURATED

Promote book reading habit for progress: Chief adviser

Buy at least one book each month and present book to loved ones

UNB, Dhaka

Chief Adviser Fakhruddin Ahmed yesterday called for promoting book-reading habit every nook and corner of society as a movement to march on the path of progress.

The head of caretaker government also requested people to buy at least one book each month as per capability as well as present book as gift to the loved ones in social functions.

Fakhruddin made the call while inaugurating the fortnight-long 14th Dhaka Book Fair 2007 yesterday at the National Parade Square at Sher-e-Bangla Nagar in the city organised by the Cultural Affairs Ministry and Jatiya Granth Kendra (National Book Centre).

The theme of this year's fair is 'Anando O Samridhish Jonya Bol' (Book is for Pleasure and Prosperity). About 123 publishers are participating in the fair.

On behalf of civil society, former vice-chancellor of Jahangirnagar University Prof Zillur Rahman Siddiqui and Mohiuddin Ahmed, the proprietor of University Press Ltd (UPL), on behalf of publishers also spoke at the inaugural function with Cultural Affairs Secretary ABM Abdul Huq in the chair. Director of the National Book Centre M Mahmudur Rahman delivered welcome address.

The chief adviser said, nowadays, the tradition of presenting book as gift at family and social functions has almost disappeared.

Instead, giving unnecessary or eye-catching items has become a practice of the day. "Let's give up this habit," said Fakhruddin, whose caretaker government has kicked off widespread socio-political reforms.

It is universally recognised that there is no alternative to book to build a knowledge-based society, he said. However, in many cases, it's not possible in Bangladesh to build up family or personal library. But it is not impossible at all to establish library at each para or village, or at least in union, with combined efforts, he noted and hoped that local governments would play their pivotal role in the future in this matter.

He, however, said many socially conscious individuals and institutions have already come up in this sector as mobile library has been set up in some places.

Appreciating such initiatives, the CA held out government support in this regard, if necessary.

"Book movement has a close relation with library and book fair. We will have to further strengthen this movement to build up skilled and creative human resources in the country."

He told the audience that appeal of book is forever and universal so the demand and necessity of book did not decrease even in the age of Information Technology and Internet.

Responding to the suggestions made by Prof Zillur Rahman Siddiqui and publisher Mohiuddin Ahmed, he hoped that the Cultural Affairs Ministry would take those into account for realisation and examination.

In his speech Prof Zillur Rahman said in a country library plays a big role in expansion of writing and reading book.

"There may be library movement merely in name but not in existence in the country," he told the function. Citing newspaper reports about misuse of money in the name of book project in the past, he said for this reason "fake writers and publishers have been created".

He emphasised publication of good books, creation of atmosphere of buying books and holding book fair all the year round in various parts of the country on small and big scale.

Mohiuddin raised some demands regarding national book policy, waiving tax on book publication.

Later, the chief adviser went around some bookstalls at the fair.
