Making parliament effective

The best way to do it is to enable the parliament to exercise its sovereign right on behalf of the people to oversee every aspect of the governmental activities -- the administering of the ministries, piloting legislation, making budgets, checking spendings and above all in representing the country and the people. And here both the government and the opposition -- which alternates its role with the electoral process, should act together to make parliament effective.

FROM PAGE 18

in legislation is exercised by the executive. So in these particular fields we should concentrate on how to make Parliament effective without becoming radical to make it a perfect system, asserting the sovereign right of the people to govern itself through its elected representatives.

About the mechanism of controlling the government the fruitful use of question hour is very urgent. "Question time is one of the last bastions of the right of private members to exercise political control over government." "Posing questions to ministers does not consist in merely pumping out information from the government or the grievances of constituencies. The question hour in Pakistan Parliament was usefully utilised by the legislators from the then East Pakistan to bring to the public the extent of economic disparity between the two wings of Pakistan that contributed much to consolidating the public opinion to demand the right to self-rule and ultimately for independence.

The supplementaries at the same time are more important than the question itself as than bring out the core of the matter, if the members so want it. So sufficient supplementaries should be allowed and the length of time of question hour may be extended to accommodate more supplementaries. Herein comes the responsibility of MPs as not to fritter away the chance of making the government accountable to it by unprofitable questions and supplementaries. The duty of the chair, as well of the Parliament secretariat, running the government but amendments with regards to hour is not overburdened everyother thing as well. with questions respective take responsibility to educate and guide its members in all sorts of parliamentary engagements including formulating questions and supplementaries. The individual members in the parliament bears the responsibility for his or her work and may even excel in that. But to make Parliament meaningful it needs the coordinated and concerted efforts of all.

One redeeming feature of the Seventh Parliament of Bangladesh is the introduction of Prime Minister's Question Hour. My own motion in this regard in the Fifth Parliament got a cold shoulder from the Rules of Procedure committee. In a Parliamentary system the Prime Minister is the number one executive and by virtue of his/her becoming leader of the house too in our Parliament, a thorough scrutiny of his/her work is all the more essential. But the Prime Minister's question hour now being practised is half baked one. This has not been properly conceived. As the practice has shown that the PM is not confronted on policy matters, rather the questions are put in such a way as to allow her making speeches on government's good doings. But even with this weakness the Prime Minister's Question Hour can make parliament effective, as the PM in our country is more than equal in the Cabinet. He or she combines in him/her ation is quite frustrating. In not only the responsibility of the second parliament my to committee report; (4) any practical impact.

regards to the reform of committee composition and operis to see that the question also of party functions and the amendment of the provi-

Ministerial Committees are from among the members. erly. chaired by the Minister; (2) But more things are to be Committee has no enforcing done to make committees mechanism/authority; (3) really effective to give very important. As has been marked by aggressive delivery Public has no or limited access strength to the whole system. The debates should be held Financial accounting and in public, except in the case investigative committees are of clearly defined matters of far behind schedule to have high security concern. The demand to know the justifi- parliaments to stupefy the reports should be made pub-My own experience with lic and should not only be law the government wants to whether this public exercise is laid on the table as is the enact and the effect of it on at all necessary or not. The usual practice, but should the society. In the matter of media now a days plays also be debated.

ening the committee and its functioning involve issues of

sion of minister chairing the political culture as well as expected and be achieved ignoring substantive issues The use of adjournment committees on its own minis- institutional and logistic from the proposed expendi- sometimes and highlighting nature. Though there are motion has been watered try was voted out on the support. The political culture ture. For proper scrutiny of the trifles that tempt the memclear rules, the practice is down to 'definite matters of ground that in that case the should envisage election of the ministerial work the law bers to keep them busy with otherwise. The respective interest and of public impor- administrative personnel the chair from among the on secrecy should go. the trivilities. So the role of parliamentary parties are to tance' in the Rules of would not feel obliged to opposition. Particularly com- Otherwise everything would media is to encourage Procedure. Although the attend the committee or send mittees on financial account- be hidden under the carpet in debates on issues of public majority of the adjournment papers to it or would dilly- ing and the investigative com- the name of observing the concern. The introduction of motions cannot meet the dally the whole process. mittees should be chaired by oath of secrecy the executives television has made the thing rigour of the rules, the These arguments themselves the opposition. This practice take while assuming respon- more complicated as TV Speaker while hearing the show that even though it is is followed by several coun-sibility of the government. minister's objections on the clearly written in the rules tries. The chair of the Public Everything must be transpargrounds of its inadmissibility that committee would be able Accounts Committee is given ent and made known to the can allow the members to be to summon any person or to the opposition. In some members. The parliament informed about the matter paper to testify before it, countries the committee on should develop comprehenand at the same time can these are not taken very seri- Foreign Affairs is usually sive system of investigatory suggest a member to pick up ously. As has been told earlier given to important leader of committees which for examthe topic under an appropri- though parliament by Fifth the opposition. In nominat- ple, could extend parliamen-Amendment was restored, it ing members to the commit- tary scrutiny to policies on But the most important acted as an adjunct of the tees MPs should be given to women, on security and on weapon for making parlia- executive only. But the the same committee in suc- judicial system. ment effective is the commit- changeover to a parliamen- cessive parliament so that the tee. It is said that "a legislature tary system also did not individual members can spe- complete overhauling of the may be known by the com- change the mind set about cialise on the subject. But Rules & Procedures to absorb mittee it keeps." Though the parliament automatically, what is more important is the the spirit of the change in constitution of Bangladesh rather it persisted. So the logistical support to the mem- constitution where it is necesand the Rules of Procedures Fifth Parliament also did not bers of the committees. The sary. Institutional and operaspelled out in clear terms the consider my proposals. It MPs in Bangladesh are contional reforms are to be made formation and functioning of was sent to the cold storage strained by the lack of infor- so that the parliament can act committees but here the again and did not get to see mation, research support and according to expectations of greatest weakness of the par- the light of the day again above all staff support. They the people. liament still persists. The until the Seventh Parliament are to deal with every aspect report of the Team Leader on took up the issue. The sub- of parliamentary work along the performance on the floor the implementation plan on committee to propose with his work in the constitu- of the House is also very Strengthening of the amendment to the rules & ency. So if parliament is to be important. There is a notice-Parliament, jointly sponsored procedures has proposed made effective it should be able deterioration of quality enable the parliament to by GOB and UNDP, has listed that the chairman of the given resources for giving of debate on the floor of the exercise its sovereign right on the weaknesses of the com- standing committees on support to its members to House. The members are mittee system as: (1) ministries should be selected perform their function prop-

the role of committee is also parliamentary speeches are said earlier the executive and is aimed more at scoring pushes through the legislation it wants. It is through the of debates, jeering and cheercommittee parliament can ing have become norm in our cation and purpose of a new public in even thinking approving the spending of important part in influencing Possible ways of strength- the government it should be parliamentary debates. There professional and demand as is growing trend in parliato what output or results are mentary reporting about

These works require the

Besides committee work, more interested about playing to the gallery than taking In matters of legislation up substantive issues. The political point. The blocking demands showmanship.

There is also serious gender imbalance in many parliaments of the world including ours. The Bangladesh parliament is extremely unrepresentative in composition as far as woman is concerned who are fifty percent of our population. The election process to the reserved seats for woman is also a slur to the womenfolk. The present women MPs cannot apply their strength due to selection. They are used to ensure or bolster the strength of the majority party in parliament. The debates in the parliament are also gender biased and even disrespectful to women. The gender balance should be corrected immediately so that the women's voice is

The best way to do it is to behalf of the people to oversee every aspect of the governmental activities -- the administering of the ministries, piloting legislation, making budgets, checking spendings and above all in representing the country and the people. And here both the government and the opposition -- which alternates its role with the electoral process, should act together to make parliament effective.

The author was member of parliament in the Second and Fifth Parliament of Bangladesh and is the President, Workers Party of Bangladesh.