Egg tempera with a flare

Artworks by the participants of the workshop

CULTURAL CORRESPONDENT

Shahid Kabir, who is here for a while from Spain, conducted a workshop with over 300 students at the Institute of Fine Arts DU, recently. The paintings, the result of the workshop are now being displayed at Zainul Gallery-2.

"I love this tempera medium," says Shahid Kabir," and have worked in it for 35 years apart from doing oils and acrylic. This technique has been used by Moghul artists and also by the painters of the Anjanta and Elora caves. One has to concentrate a lot when working in this medium. This is the cheapest possible medium that will last for a long time. This technique existed even before oil painting and will stand the rigours of weathers more than oil.

"This is done by mixing the egg yolk with water and linseed oil on the palette, and then applying the colours with the mixture. I told the students to see apparently unimportant things around them and use them as their subjects. I myself like to paint the simple things in life. Imagination did not take an important part in creating these paintings. I tried to show the young painters to see the objects with spirit.

"We selected 250 works from the 400 that were done. The young people are our future: they are our new generation of Picassos and Frida Kahlos. I tried to guide the painters to depict what they felt and what they loved.

" It was interesting to see that the artists ranged from 20 years old 1" year students to a retired Air force officer of 70.

Queenie, an established artist, who also participated in the workshop, said, "Workshops as we know generally include senior artists or consists of only a small group. This workshop was different and open to all artists. When the artists went about their work four days, it was like a 'mela' with the painters spread out over the lawns of the Fine Arts Institute, verandas and an auditorium at the back. I myself did some rickshaws.'

Ananna has a still life with red pomegranates on a bowl with succulent seeds all around them. Gazi Taslima has done a red and green dragon fly with pink and white translucent wings. Faisal Ahmed has a collection of coloured jars in his painting. Abul Kalam Shamsuddin depicts a vagrant woman in a tattered sari lying on the road-

Nazma Akter brings in a handful of leaves on a blue background with tiny bottle green leaves contained in it. Mithun Dutta also glorified nature, along with Mousumi Sultana. One brings in red and yellow flowers, with a lot of pale blue texture work at the back, while the other brings in fleshy white magnolia along with their enveloping dark leaves.

MM Maizuddin presents Shahid Kabir's portrait with vibrant colours and careful lines. Murad Hossain has a buffalo with a rider carrying an umbrella in a field of brown and yellow grass. Nilima Sarkar has played with they eye of a woman and presents it in indigo and red with a striking effect. Shamsun Nahar has depicted an exotic bird with a shaded backdrop of earthy colours.

The exhibition is indeed a display of works of promising artists.

The display ends on May 17th.

Bauls honoured in Sylhet

IQBAL SIDDIQUEE, Sylhet

At their second anniversary celebration, Baul Kalyan Samity, Sylhet honoured four renowned bauls of Sylhet. artistes are, Kafil Uddin Sarker, Sabul Miah, Waris Ali and Ataur Rahman.

The Deputy Commissioner of Sylhet, Harun-Ur-Rashid Khan was the chief guest at the programme. He said, "The greater Sylhet region has a heritage of mysticism, enriched by contributions of creative geniuses like Hason Raja, Arkum Shah, Radharomon Dutta, Sitalong Shah, Durbin Shah, Ruhi Thakur and "Baul Samrat" Shah Abdul Karim. Messages of love, humanism and the inseparable bond with the creator are the essence of their songs."

"We should properly evaluate their contributions to the society," he added.
