

Baugh tests Aussies

AFP, Trelawny

Stuart MacGill gave evidence that he could pose a serious challenge to West Indies, when he helped Australia to take control of their three-day tour match against Jamaica.

MacGill was the most successful Australia bowler with four wickets for 79 runs from 21 overs, but he was overshadowed by Carlton Baugh Jr, whose undefeated 111 was the backbone of Jamaica's first innings total of 279.

The opening pair of Phil Jaques -- not out on 44 -- and Simon Katich -- not out on 35 -- safely navigated Australia to 89 without loss when stumps were drawn on the opening day at the Trelawny Multi-Purpose Stadium.

MacGill is eyeing a return to the Test side following recent wrist surgery, and he would have gained a boost of confidence, after he removed Lorenzo Ingram for 10, Shawn Findlay for six, and Xavier Marshall for 30 in a 12-over spell, as Jamaica declined to 135 for five at lunch.

After the interval however, he and the Australian bowlers had to endure the pyrotechnics from Baugh.

Australia may not encounter the pint-sized Jamaica wicketkeeper-batsman again on this trip, since the last time he played for West Indies was the final of the 2006 Champions Trophy in India.

But the Aussies' would have been shell-shocked by his destructive display that gave the West Indies selectors a healthy nudge in the ribs, as he blasted his eighth first-class hundred.

Brad Haddin had a memorable day behind the stumps snaring three catches and effecting two stumpings, but he failed to hold an edge from Baugh, when the batsman was on seven.

Australia paid for this miss, as Baugh ravaged nine fours and a pair of sixes from 112 balls, and added 89 for the ninth wicket with tail-ender Gavin Wallace, after the Jamaicans subsided to 205 for eight.

Australia again turned to MacGill, and he made the breakthrough, when he had Wallace caught behind for 22 before Brett Lee brought the innings to a close.

This is Australia's only practice match prior to next week's opening Test of three against West Indies, starting on Thursday at Sabina Park in the Jamaica capital of Kingston.

The second Test starts on May 30 at the Vivian Richards Cricket Ground in Antigua, and the third Test start on June 12 at Kensington Oval in Barbados.

The Aussies also contest a Twenty20 International on June 20 at Kensington Oval, as well as five One-day Internationals -- on June 24 at the Arnos Vale Sports Complex in St. Vincent, on June 27 and 29 at Queen's Park in Grenada, and on July 4 and 6 at Warner Park in St. Kitts.

Australia held the Frank Worrell Trophy -- symbol of supremacy against West Indies -- and they have not lost a Test series in the Caribbean since 1991.

only to have it back in the blink of an eye before firing home from an acute angle.

The double blow served as a wakeup call for Abahani, who bounced back in the 24th minute with Shuvo reducing the margin from the penalty corner. Mohammedan however were quick to retaliate when Isahound the board from a conventional penalty corner in the 30th minute.

After the breather, Abahani regrouped and changed their strategy to take control in the midfield and Pakistani Imran made it 3-2 in the 46th minute before Chayan broke the Mohammedan hearts with that stunning equaliser. The draw left Abahani at the top with 19 points while third-placed Mohammedan improved their tally to 17 points.

In the day's other match, Sonali Bank rode on Kirshna Kumar's hat-trick to bounce back from a goal down to trounce Wari Club 5-1. The bankers led the first-half 2-1.

Krishna netted four goals and Iqbal Nader added the other for the winners while Farid scored for Wari.

Although the 35-year-old Sanwar singled out Mashrafe, he praised his team's work ethic and said that the return of all-rounder Mushfiqur Rahman would boost his side a great deal. The discarded national all-rounder returned in Biman's last game against BKS after a lengthy break due to back injury.

The match will be telecast live on Bangladesh Television (BTV) from 9am.

KP could be the costliest

CRICINFO, undated

Kevin Pietersen expects to be playing in India next year, and is on the verge of signing the most lucrative deal yet witnessed in the Indian Premier League, after being offered in excess of 4 million dollars for a three-year contract by an undisclosed IPL franchise.

According to a report in Saturday's Daily Mail, the deal has been financed by one of India's wealthiest families, who want Pietersen to sign "at any price". Mahendra Singh Dhoni is currently the most valuable player in the competition, earning in excess of 1.5 million dollars a year, but such is Pietersen's appeal--on the field and off it--his final figure could yet top that.

The news comes as a blow to the England and Wales Cricket Board (ECB), who had hoped to prevent their players from being lured to India ahead of a pivotal summer that includes the ICC World Twenty20 and, of course, the Ashes. An ECB insider told the Daily Mail that the head coach, Peter Moores, would have the final say on which contracted players would be permitted to join the IPL, but in Pietersen's case, they were already resigned to making an exception.

Pietersen is currently 28 and approaching his prime as a cricketer. He has not missed a Test for England since making his debut in the 2005 Ashes, although he will now face a busy run-up to the 2009 rematch against Australia, with England scheduled to tour the Caribbean in February and March before his proposed three-week stint in India. The ECB are naturally fearful of what could happen if the workload proves too much for him, or any other colleagues who might be lured by the IPL, but they are privately resigned to the situation. One man who would not be allowed to take part, however, would be Andrew Flintoff, given his ongoing fitness problems.

Speaking to the same paper earlier in the week, Pietersen set his stall out to play for England until he is 35, but insisted that he shouldn't be denied the opportunity to make the most of his prime years. "I do wonder how long I'm going to do this for," he said. "Time will tell. I could get injured tomorrow and would be finished. That's why I was frustrated and irritated when we weren't allowed to go to India. I definitely want to go next year."

It had been mooted in some quarters that Pietersen could chose to go freelance if the ECB didn't accede to his demands, but he denied that this had entered his thoughts. "Turning down a central contract is not something that has entered my head yet," he said, "but it would be horrendous if four or five of England's best players decided to do that and go to India instead. We should not be in a position where we have to choose. No one else had to."

In a more promising development for the ECB, their proposed tie-up with Allen Stanford is nearing completion. According to the Daily Telegraph, the deal will be worth 200 million dollars over five years, with an annual 20 million dollars match to be staged in Antigua until 2012. "The lawyers are still working on the fine print," the ECB's chief executive, David Collier, told the paper, "but we have finalised our negotiations and everything is in place."

who quickly made his presence felt with a couple of superb pull shots when Kumble pitched it fractionally short. Smith reached his half-century in the same over, pulling the last ball of Kumble's spell over midwicket for six. Dravid turned to pace, medium pace and spin, but the run-fest continued unabated as Watson teed off whenever the ball was pitched on a length, freeing his arms to cut, pull and drive the bowlers.

As has happened throughout the tournament, Bangalore were let down in the field as well. Apart from Devraj Patil's poor form behind the stumps, there were misfields galore in the outfield. Misbahul Haq dropped a tough chance from Watson when he was on 19, Praveen Kumar didn't react at all to a lofted shot from Smith four balls later when it dropped a few feet in front of him, and Vinay Kumar rounded off a miserable performance by missing a sitter from Watson in the final over.

Bangalore's run-chase was a non-starter. The out-of-sorts J Arunkumar holed out to mid-off in the first over. Misbah's disappointing tournament continued -- he has now scored 32 runs in four innings -- as he hopelessly miscued a pull to mid-on, and when Virat Kohli chipped on onto his stumps off the impressive Sohail Tanvir, Bangalore's total read a shambolic 5 for 3. Kallis's method of moving across his stumps and flicking everything to the on side fetched him a disappointing 20 from 29 balls. The difference in the fielding of the two teams came out starkly too, as Shane Warne plucked off a stunning caught-and-bowled low to his right when Zaheer Khan clubbed one straight back to him.

The only show of resistance came from Dravid, whose unbeaten 75 was a strong message to the rest of his batsmen. The result was admittedly a foregone conclusion, but Dravid made his point emphatically, carving six sixes, including three in an over from Yusuf Pathan. That knock lifted Bangalore to a somewhat respectable total, but it was hardly enough to stop Rajasthan, who have now won all six games at home.

and Manfred Kaltz (581) playing more matches in the top flight.

The 86-times capped Kahn almost single-handed led Germany into the 2002 World Cup final, only to blunder there as Brazil won 2-0. He saved three penalties against Valencia in 2001 to give Bayern the Champions League trophy, one of 16 titles he won with Germany's number one club.

Kahn has been named everything from "Titan" (in Germany) and "King Kahn" (Fans in Asia where he is immensely popular) to "Son of a Bitch" (angry Spanish fans who he frustrated so many times in matches against Real Madrid, Valencia or Getafe) during his career spanning almost two decades.

He was pelted with bananas and a golf ball by irate German fans' left his pregnant wife for a new girlfriend and physically attacked players himself.

But everything he did and said in one way or another only underlined his unique dedication.

The bananas were thrown in reference to his almost gorilla-like stature from many hours spent in the gym and on the training field. His motto is "never give up," according to his profile on the Bayern website. His characteristics are listed there as "impatient, disciplined, ambitious."

Kahn's career started at SC Karlsruhe where he played his first Bundesliga match in 1987 and was a regular starter from 1990 onwards. He then left for Munich in 1994 to become a legend.

The almost brutal attacks on Dortmund's Heiko Herrlich and Stephane Chapuisat, Leverkusen's Thomas Brdicar, or even a Munich teammate at the time in Andreas Herzog made plenty of headlines.

Kahn names them "positive aggression, saying: "I often use my body language to show my team 'complete presence' - and to instil respect, or even better fear, on the opponent."

Others had a different view of these outbursts.

"He didn't bite me, but I was happy because this unique athlete had shown a weakness," said Herrlich of the 1999 incident.

Regardless of his antics there is no debate that Kahn was a superb goalkeeper who won or lost many memorable matches.

The 1999 Champions League final which Munich lost in the final minutes against Manchester United. The 2002 World Cup final in Yokohama, where the images of him sitting leaning against the right post amid celebrating Brazilians are a lasting memory.

Then coach Rudi Voeller named the 2002 World Cup the turning point with Kahn allowing just one goal in six matches to the final, and his error then making him "human after all."

But Kahn showed the biggest greatness in his darkest career hour, being degraded to Germany number two behind long-time foe Jens Lehmann by coach Jürgen Klinsmann just ahead of the home World Cup in 2006.

The entire nation expected him to withdraw from the team, but instead Kahn was a devoted member of the squad and then even walked up to wish Lehmann luck ahead of the penalty shootout with Argentina.

"I heard what Kahn said. It wasn't advice, it was encouragement. This gesture impressed me immensely. It was absolutely honest, absolute greatness...I bow before this sporting spirit of Oliver Kahn," said goalkeeper coach Andreas Koepke.

Even Arsenal's Lehmann had a fond message for Kahn last Saturday in ZDF television.

"Despite all our rivalry, I have got to say that your attitude has always impressed me immensely. I could never lose the motivation to train hard because I knew there was somebody in Munich who was training even harder or equally hard with the aim of being the best."

"It helped me to improve and also deal with competition for a place at club level and I thank you for that and wish you all the best for the future," said Lehmann.

Deccan down, but not out

PTI, Hyderabad

The Deccan Chargers would leave their disappointments behind and plan ahead for the future in the Indian Premier League Twenty20 tournament, said captain Adam Gilchrist yesterday.

Though the team is disappointed over its rough patch, it is determined to do well in future, he said in an interaction, along with VVS Laxman, with the listeners of a private FM network here.

Echoing Gilchrist's words, Laxman said it is most unfortunate that the team is not qualifying for the semifinals of the inaugural IPL tournament.

The team will be around for the next year and it can plan for the future, he said.

The stylish Hyderabad batsman wanted the fans to keep supporting the team and have faith in it.

To a query, Gilchrist said IPL is an exciting concept and that he thoroughly enjoyed playing in the competition. The Australian had a word of praise for young players like Rohit Sharma and Andhra's Venugopal Rao and PVijay Kumar.

Sharma, who is only 21, played consistently well in the series, a quality which the team lacked, he said.

With 331 runs, Sharma is the highest run-getter for the Deccan Chargers in the contest. The Mumbai batsman has already made an impact with his remarkable performance, Laxman said, describing him as an excellent prospect for the country.

With only two wins from 10 matches, Deccan Chargers are virtually out of the semifinal race in the IPL series. The team faces Mumbai Indians on Sunday.

Dada's advice to Bhajji

AGENCIES, undated

As Harbhajan Singh serves yet another ban for an on-field spat, former India skipper Sourav Ganguly offers the beleaguered off-spinner a simple piece of advice to steer clear of controversies -- "control your aggression."

... We have all (the senior players) reasoned with him and he needs to understand how vital he is to the team and so he should control himself," Ganguly said.

Harbhajan was handed a five-match ODI ban besides being barred from the remainder of the Indian Premier League for slapping India teammate S Sreesanth after an IPL match last month.

The flamboyant bowler remains apologetic about the incident and has said the ugly episode was the worst crisis he has had to deal with after the emotional turmoil he faced following the death of his father.

India-Argentina final

AFP, Ipoh

A young Indian team edged Malaysia 2-1 on Saturday to qualify for the final of the Sultan Azlan Shah Cup field hockey tournament.

India, with 12 points from four wins and two defeats, is ranked second in the seven-nation standing. The junior team will meet Argentina in Sunday's final.

Argentina had thrashed India 5-1 in the preliminary rounds of the tournament. In Saturday's game, they drew 2-2 with Canada but still topped the charts with 14 points from four earlier wins and two draws.

Hosts Malaysia finished last in the standings with four points from six matches. They will not feature in the playoff match.

Malaysia, who needed a win over India to play off for fifth place, had the chance to take the lead in the fifth minute.

Forward S. Selvaraju's hit from the left bounced off goalkeeper Adrian Dsouza's pads. However, Tengku Ahmad Tajuddin failed to push the ball into the goal.

India snatched a 2-0 lead within three minutes in the first 15 minutes of the match. Defender Sandeep Singh's free hit from the right was well connected into the goal by Shivendra Singh in the 12th minute.

Three minutes later, India won a penalty stroke when defender Mohd Madzi Ikmar Mohd Noor stopped a penalty corner flick with his body.

The lanky Sandeep Singh then added to the Indian side's lead after goalkeeper S. Kumar's attempts to save the ball went the wrong way. It was his eighth goal in six matches.

Malaysian forward Ismail Abu had a chance to score in the 20th minute with just goalkeeper Dsouza to beat, but he failed.

Malaysia, who went all out to score, later earned a penalty corner with six seconds remaining on the clock. Defender Mohd Amin Rahim scored off a low flick. "Although we failed to qualify for the playoff, my boys played well against India. We created a lot of chances," said Malaysian coach Sarjit Singh.

India coach A K Bansal said they were delighted to come back from two defeats in the first two matches to qualify into the final.

"We won the last four matches, and the win over Malaysia was really good as they gave us a fight until the last seconds."

"We lost to Argentina in the preliminary rounds and will go all out to get the better of them," Bansal said.

Meanwhile, Argentina took a 2-0 lead with field goals by Facundo Callioni in the 47th minute and Martin Ezequiel Sosa in the 59th minute.

Canada fought back in the last nine minutes of the match to equalise.

Sukhwinder Singh scored off a penalty corner set piece in the 61st minute, and with one minute before time was up, Ravi Kahlon equalised from close range.

Federer breezes into final

AFP, Hamburg

Defending champion Roger Federer will contest the final of the Hamburg Masters Series here for the fifth time in his career after seeing off Italy's Andreas Seppi in Saturday's semifinal.

The world number one was again untroubled, as he has been throughout this tournament, when he recorded a 6-3, 6-1 win over Seppi, ranked 43rd in the world, who had reached the last four of a Masters Series for the first time.

The Italian had his chances, but Federer never allowed him to settle and having dominated throughout, he broke the Italian's serve for the third and final time in the second set to claim the win in 79 minutes.

"It was quite a long first set and I created a lot of opportunities which wore him down for the second," said Federer on a soggy day in Hamburg where the stadium roof was closed due to persistent rain.

"The play was quite wet and heavy, which meant it was good for the drop shots and Seppi used that tactic with some nice shots."

The Swiss master and four time winner here plays the victor of the show-down between clay-court

King Rafael Nadal and Australian Open champion Novak Djokovic in Sunday's final.

Having beaten Nadal in last year's final, 2-6, 6-2, 6-0, to break the Spaniards' 81-match winning streak, Federer said he was relishing the final having not dropped a set here so far.

He said: "I came here last year having just split with my coach and coming from Rome, I wasn't happy with my mental approach."

"I was really aggressive on my back-hand in the final, but it was a good hard match and I am sure tomorrow (Sunday) will again be good preparation for Roland Garros."

Mumbai mauled Kolkata

CRICINFO, undated

Shaun Pollock led a stand-out seam-bowling performance as the Mumbai Indians notched up the most convincing win of the Indian Premier League, and their fifth in a row, handing the Kolkata Knight Riders an eight-wicket drubbing at the Wankhede Stadium on Friday.

None of Kolkata's batsmen came to terms with the seamer-friendly pitch, crumbling to an embarrassing 67 all out -- the lowest score of the tournament and the fifth-lowest in all Twenty20 matches -- before Sanath Jayasuriya hastened the finish with a 17-ball 48, as Mumbai sailed home with 87 deliveries to spare -- a record in all Twenty20 games -- significantly boosting their hopes of a semifinal berth.

The visitors were put in by Sachin Tendulkar, who won his second toss in a row, but even he wouldn't have dreamed of the display his bowlers served up. The pitch helped significantly, offering bounce and plenty of seam movement to each of the five bowlers who were used -- in fact, so good were the conditions for seam bowling that Rajesh Pawar, the left-arm spinner who made his IPL debut, wasn't even pressed into the attack.

The start was deceptively normal, with Salman Butt moving away to club Pollock down the ground for four, and then carving Ashish Nehra for the 400th six of the IPL. From then on, only one team did all the celebrating.

Pollock led the way, bowling with impeccable control, seaming the ball both ways from a perfect length, and giving the batsmen no chance. Against a top four that has an equal mix of right- and left-handers, Pollock kept his line around off stump against both, extracting bounce and seaming the ball away to cut.

induce the edge. Butt was the first to perish to the movement, getting a leading edge while trying to flick, offering Tendulkar the first of four catches.

Thereafter, the slide was swift. Kolkata made the situation worse when Aakash Chopra was involved in his second mix-up with Sourav Ganguly in three games, charging down the pitch even as Ganguly didn't respond. Another perfect delivery in the corridor from Pollock accounted for David Hussey, and when Tendulkar decided to bowl his four overs on the trot, Pollock responded by inducing an edge off Mohammad Hafeez, which was snaffled by Robin Uthappa at a wide second slip.

Pollock was done, finishing with figures of 3 for 12, but there was no respite for Kolkata, as Dwayne Bravo continued from where Pollock had left off, getting exaggerated seam movement in both directions. Wriddhiman Saha was defeated by the bounce and movement, and slashed to Tendulkar, and Kolkata had lost half their side for 29.

With the conditions so friendly for the seamers, Tendulkar cleverly decided to use Dominic Thorneley and Rohan Raje, both medium-pace bowlers, and the results came almost instantly. Raje removed the dangerous Laxmi Ratan Shukla with a superb delivery which pitched on middle and seamed away to take off stump.

Through the destruction at the other end, Ganguly hung on patiently, hoping to weather the storm and guide Kolkata to a respectable total. He came in to bat in the third over and stayed till the 13th, but was stuck at the non-striker's end most of the time, facing only 20 deliveries as the batting line-up was destroyed at the other end. He finally perished in tame fashion, as Yogesh Takavale hung on to a catch with his second attempt as Ganguly tried to cut. With Kolkata's last hope falling, the rest followed quickly.

Kolkata's only hope of avoiding complete embarrassment was for Shoaib Akhtar to do an encore of the previous game. He began with a fiery first over, having Jayasuriya dropped at slip off the first ball, and then winning his personal battle with Tendulkar, who nibbled one to the wicketkeeper, slightly dampening the spirits of the home crowd.

Jayasuriya's response to that dismissal was emphatic, as he waded into Ishant Sharma and Shoaib in the next two overs. After clipping Ishant unconvincingly over mid-on, he found his timing perfectly in Shoaib's next over, afflicked and a short-arm pull both sailed over the boundary, while two crisp drives raced through the covers in an over which leaked 23, more than one-third of the target.

The Shoaib threat was over, and the end came soon after, as Jayasuriya flicked a no-ball off Ishant for his 17th six of the IPL, the highest for a batsman in the tournament, and then finished it off next ball. Mumbai now have the best net run-rate, and with ten points from nine games, have given themselves an excellent chance of making the last four.
