69 Tigers killed in two days of fighting

AFP, AP, Colombo

At least 69 Tiger rebels and two soldiers have been killed in heavy security forces wrested more territory from the guerrillas, the defence ministry said Thursday. Heavy fighting since Tuesday left 69 Tiger guerrillas and two soldiers killed in separate clashes across the districts of Vavuniya, Mannar, Mullaitivu and Jaffna, the ministry

It said Mi-24 helicopter gunships were deployed Wednesday to pound suspected positions of the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE) in the Mannar district.

Lanka's embattled northern region killed at least 32 ethnic Tamil rebels and four government soldiers, the military said Wednesday.

Fighting has escalated in recent months as government forces have tried to break into the Tamil Tigers' northern strongholds from four fighting in Sri Lanka's north where fronts. The government has pledged to capture rebel-held territory and crush the insurgents by the end of the year.

> Tuesday in the Mannar, Vavuniya, Welioya and Jaffna areas bordering the guerrillas' de facto state, military spokesman Brig. Udaya Nanayakkara said.

Army troops advanced into rebel territory in Mannar district from three directions, capturing about a square mile in a battle that killed 10 rebels and wounded five A new wave of fighting across Sri soldiers, Nanayakkara said. Other fighting in Mannar killed three ently verify the military reports rebels and one soldier, he said.

> Separate clashes in Vavuniya killed 13 rebels and one soldier, while battles in Jaffna and Welioya killed six rebels and two soldiers, Nanayakkara said.

Also Tuesday, air force fighters bombed a training base in the rebel stronghold of Mullaitivu while helicopter gunships pounded rebel bunkers along the front lines in The latest battles took place Mannar, a military statement said.

The military did not give any figures for casualties or damage from the air attacks.

Rebel spokesman Thaya Master confirmed that heavy fighting took place in Mannar on Tuesday, but did not give casualty figures. He declined to comment on other fighting, saying he needed to check the military's claims with his superiors.

It was not possible to independbecause journalists are banned from the northern jungles where much of the fighting takes place.

Each side commonly exaggerates its enemy's casualties and downplays its own.

There was no immediate word from the Tigers on the latest fighting, but the guerrillas in a statement said a civilian was killed in a mine attack carried out by government commandos inside rebelheld territory on Wednesday.

The defence ministry claims raise the number of rebels reported killed by government troops since the beginning of the year to 4,459, against the loss of 414 soldiers.

The Tamil Tiger rebels have fought since 1983 to create an independent state for ethnic minority Tamils, who have been marginalized by successive governments controlled by ethnic Sinhalese. More than 70,000 people have been killed in the conflict.

INDO-AMERICAN NUKE DEAL N Korean nuke declaration US hopes India will underscores shift complete internal in Bush policy processes

AFP, Washington

North Korea's declaration of its nuclear program may be unprecedented but it stems from a shift in President George W. Bush's once tough stand on the hardline communist state.

In a desperate move to notch a rare foreign policy victory before Bush leaves office in January, Washington seems so anxious to reach an aid-for-disarmament deal with Pyongyang, experts said.

Key questions on North Korea's secret nuclear weapons network are being set aside in a quest to achieve a legacy for the Bush administration, they said.

"There does appear to be eagerness on the administration's part to get an agreement that is less than complete," said Bruce Klingner, a former CIA officer in charge of North Korean affairs.

The Bush administration first took a confrontational posture in dealing with North Korea as part of North Korea agreed to abandon its a doctrine of regime change and pre-emptive military action -highlighted by the linking of Pyongyang to an "axis-of-evil" with Iran and Saddan Hussein's Iraq, and the subsequent 2003 invasion

The administration then made a 180-degree turn to traditional North Korea fully abandon its diplomacy, notably agreeing to engage directly with North Korea dictator Kim Jong-Il's regime while participating in six party nuclear talks involving the United States, China, Japan, the two Koreas and programs before the US leader leaves office in January.

The six-party deal in which nuclear weapons in return for diplomatic, security and aid guarantees also mirrored a denuclearisation accord the Clinton administration struck with Pyongyang and which the successor administration dumped.

But the new deal may never see nuclear weapons, experts said, citing lack of attention to Pyongyang's suspected uranium enrichment program and proliferation activities.

"No one knows how North Korea will behave and no one is Bush even sent Kim an unprece- sure if the six parties will remain in if he fully disclosed his nuclear International Studies.

Why is Mars two-faced? Scientists say fresh evidence supports the theory that a monster impact punched the red planet, leaving behind perhaps the largest gash on any heavenly body in the solar sys-

Today, the Martian surface has a split personality. The southern hemisphere of Mars is pockmarked and filled with ancient rugged highlands. By contrast, the northern hemisphere is smoother and covered by low-lying plains.

Three papers in Thursday's journal

Nature provide the most convincing evidence yet that an outside force was responsible. According to the researchers, an asteroid or comet whacked a young Mars some 4 billion years ago, blasting away much of its northern crust and creating a giant hole over 40 percent of the surface.

New calculations reveal the crater known as the Borealis basin measures 5,300 miles across and 6,600 miles long the size of Asia, Europe and Australia combined. It's believed to be four times bigger than the current titleholder, the South Pole-Aitken basin on Earth's moon.

This artists rendition released by Jeffery Andrews-Hanna of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, shows an impact on the surface of Mars.
