

Violence hinders women's political participation, empowerment

Speakers tell experience sharing meet

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Violence against women in politics hinders their political participation and empowerment in South Asian countries, said speakers yesterday at a regional experience sharing programme.

At the programme titled 'Regional Experience Sharing Programme at National Level of the Status of Women in Politics', they highlighted the state of women's political participation, misconceptions about violence against women in politics (VAWIP) and different forms of violence against women in politics in the region.

While presenting the keynote paper, South Asia Partnership (SAP) International Executive Director Dr Rohit Kumar Nepali said violence against women in politics takes place in the forms of murder and physical assault, rape and sexual exploitation, threat and coercion, character assassination, stigmatisation and social boycott for being involved in politics.

He suggested promoting South Asian Network of Women in Politics for combating issues of violence against women in politics, promoting social protection mechanism for reducing vulnerability of women politicians from the adverse effects of violence and establishing regional knowledge sharing platform to raise the voices of VAWIP.

Exploration of alternative policies for addressing issues of violence against women in politics in South Asia is important while advocating, lobbying and campaigning at national level on the issues of gender-insensitive political culture and relevance of breaking the culture of silence should be stressed, he added.

However, a three-year project titled 'Violence against Women in Politics' (VAWIP) has been taken by the SAP International to overcome the barriers of women's participation in politics, he added.

South Asia Partnership (SAP) Bangladesh organised the programme at Brac Centre Inn where the speakers demanded 33 percent reserved seats for women in the parliament through direct election.

The speakers said the state of women's representation in the parliament is very meagre with only 2 percent, while it is 33 percent in Nepal, 21 percent in Pakistan and 8.3 percent in India.

DemocracyWatch Executive Director Taleya Rehman said, "In Bangladesh we have reserved seats for women in the parliament, but the tragedy is that they are only selected for those seats. That is why, the women cannot play effective role in decision making. They don't have power, cannot raise their voice and often they don't have knowledge about constituency."

If the demand for one-third reserved seats for women in the parliament would be met, 33 percent women's representation in political parties would be seen gradually, she said, adding that our political parties lack democratic practices.

Prof Zerina Rahman Khan of Public Administration department at Dhaka University (DU) said violence against women in politics is the biggest hindrance for a bigger role of the women in politics as a whole.

The speakers also stressed the need for converting the National Women Development Policy into a law to sensitise the law enforcement agencies regarding women politicians and to announce election schedule within a short time to facilitate women's participation in politics.

Moderated by SAP Bangladesh Executive Director Syed Nurul Alam, the programme was also addressed by DU Prof Ishrat Shamim and representatives of different rights organisations.

Speakers at a national seminar yesterday urged the minority people living in remote areas to unite themselves for their socio-economic security and development.

The seminar was organised by Development Organisation of the Rural Poor (Dorp) with the support of Manusher Jonno at the IDB Bhaban in the city yesterday.

Dorp has been running a project titled 'Social harmony and rights' since 2004 following the sensational killings of 11 members of minority family at Banskhal upazila in Chittagong on November 18, 2003.

The only survivor of that tragic incident, Bimal Shil, who is still residing in Chittagong with his family, was present at the seminar.

He raised question about the role of the administration and media for their failure to arrest and punish the criminals.

"An alleged criminal Amin Chairman is still there and taking preparation for the upcoming upazila parishad election," said Bimal.

He lamented that police fails to trace out the criminals and the journalists do not pursue the incident which is really pathetic.

Rana Das Gupta, a senior advocate and leader of Hindu Bouddha Christian Oikya Parishad, said the number of minority people is decreasing gradually in the country.

Chairman of peace and conflict studies department at Dhaka University Prof Dalem Chandra Barman said if the society does not come forward to save the minority, constitution will fail to achieve the objective.

Brother De Suja, a human rights activist, called for observing the Banskhal killing day at the national level.

Three papers were presented at the seminar by Mohammad Osman Gani, coordinator of Social Harmony and Rights Project, Khandaker Ibrahim Khaled, columnist and economist, and Shaol Khan, a researcher.

Former adviser to a caretaker government and Chairman of the Citizen's Watch Group M Hafizuddin said lack of religious education leads to violence against humanity.

Awami League Chief Whip Abdus Shahid said no one with any religious values can kill another people.

Speaking as chief guest, Special Assistant for ICT ministry Manik Lal Samaddar said the present government is aware of such incidents and will resist them at any cost.

The European Commission (EC) will provide a grant of 13 million euros to Bangladesh Rural Advancement Committee (Brac) in support of sustainable recovery and rehabilitation of agriculture-based and non-agriculture-based livelihood in cyclone Sidr-affected coastal areas.

The delegation of the European Commission to Bangladesh signed a grant agreement with Brac to this effect yesterday, said an EC press release.

Brac Executive Director Mahabub Hossain and Dr Stefan Frowein, Ambassador of Head of delegation of the delegation of the European Commission signed the contract.

This action will help to link the relief phase, for which ECHO already provided 20.425 million euro with the longer term reconstruction and development of the affected areas.

This new EC support under the instrument for stability will provide much needed interventions to boost rehabilitation of agriculture-based and non-agriculture-based, livelihoods in severely cyclone Sidr affected areas of Bangladesh.

The action is designed to build upon previous and ongoing ECHO emergency intervention and link with ongoing DIPECHO disaster preparedness activities and the longer term EC development support for disaster risk reduction and food security.

A Joint Damage Loss and Needs Assessment, financed through the instrument for Stability, estimated the total amount of damage and losses caused by the cyclone at over 1.1 billion euro, equivalent to 2.8 percent of Bangladesh's GDP. More than two-thirds of this was physical damage and one-third economic loss.

Ambassador Frowein stated, "This additional support from the European Commission underlines the solidarity which the European Union has expressed with the government and the people of Bangladesh in the wake of this terrible natural disaster."

Youth beaten to death

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

A youth was beaten to death by a mob at Kholamora Model Town under Keraniganj Police Station yesterday for harassing girls in the area.

He was identified as Mohammad Hasan, 25.

Local people said girls had long been the victims of Hasan's eve teasing. At times he even realised ransom after abducting girls.

On Friday Hasan demanded Tk 5000 as ransom after abducting a girl, who came to visit his relatives from Comilla, and one of her kin.

A group of villagers went to talk to him regarding this yesterday morning but Hasan and his accomplices swooped on the villagers with sharp weapons and stabbed Nabi Hossain, 22, and Mohammad Zahed, 20.

Being infuriated, local people gave them a good beating.

Seriously injured Hasan was taken to a hospital where doctors declared him dead but his accomplices managed to escape.

Family members of Hasan, however, claimed that some people took Hasan out and killed him over an earlier feud.

Keraniganj police said the criminals had been abducting and harassing girls for long.

Final decision on re-demarcation of constituencies next month

UNB, Dhaka

The Election Commission (EC) will finalise its decision on re-demarcation of constituencies by the first week of next month, Election Commissioner M Sakawat Hossain yesterday said.

He said the EC would not take more than seven days after ending the ongoing hearing on objections to the draft delimitation plan.

The commission will wrap up its countrywide hearing in Rajshahi today.

"The delimitation will be finalised by the first week of July taking the people's objections into account," Sakawat told reporters at his office.

He said, "Many of the petitioners (against the draft delimitation) are former lawmakers or political activists, and their objections were mostly personal."

He said there was confusion among people over the re-demarcation as many thought that their localities might not be under the authority of the existing administrative units after the implementation of the plan.

The existing administrative setup would actually remain the same even if boundaries of the parliamentary seats are redrawn, Sakawat said.

About reforms to the electoral laws, he said people have already been aware of some of the major changes, thanks to the role of the media.

Ensure rights of indigenous people, recover lands

Speakers tell meeting on Santal revolution

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Speakers at a meeting yesterday said the next elected government should give constitutional recognition to the indigenous people as well as state recognition to the tribal freedom fighters.

They said this at a solidarity meeting organised by Bangladesh Movement for Rights of Indigenous People (BMRIP) at the Biam auditorium in the city to mark the 153rd anniversary of 'Santal Revolution' in 1855 against the British empire.

The speakers also demanded steps to recover lands of the indigenous people from the grabbers and establish a separate ministry for the indigenous people.

Awami League presidium member Amir Hossain Amu said the rights of the indigenous people can be established if a secular, democratic and progressive government is formed. He said the people of all faiths, including Muslims, Hindus, Buddhists and Christians, as well as indigenous people sacrificed their lives in the War of Liberation. So, all should enjoy equal rights, he added.

The government that came to power after the assassination of Bangabandhu Sheikh Mujibur Rahman in 1975 started repressing indigenous people, the AL leader said.

Gono Forum presidium member Pankaj Bhattacharya said, "The next elected government should make apology to the indigenous people for the repression on them."

If the CHT Peace Treaty is not fully implemented, peace and stability cannot be established in the hilly areas, he said.

He also said indigenous people should be given constitutional recognition. Many of the tribal freedom fighters did not get any recognition. They must be given the state recognition.

Language movement veteran U Shyue, a member of indigenous community, said, "I just want to see the constitutional recognition to the indigenous people before my death and the next elected government should do it."

Communist Party of Bangladesh (CPB) President Manjurul Ahsan Khan said the indigenous people should be given their due rights -- the constitutional recognition. "It is the ruling class that always represses the indigenous people," he added.

Presided over by BMRIP President Prof HKS Arefin, the meeting was addressed by Chairman of In-Depth News, Bangladesh Barrister Zakir Ahmed and Sanskrit Samannay Kendra Joint Convener Azam Faruque.
