An art school run by a Freedom Fighter

The school may not be much to look at but it provides art education for free to children in the rural area. PHOTO: STAR

MD. HOSSAIN SERAJ, Magura

Freedom Fighter Abdul Aziz is neither a reputed artist, nor an affluent man but has taken a commendable initiative. He along with seven of his colleagues has been voluntarily running at art school for rural children.

Aziz, through his own initiative and funds, has opened an art school at the remote village Rawtara -- about 13 kilometers from Magura district town -- where children get art lessons.

Lessons are free and teachers are sincere; the school usually remains vibrant with enthusiastic children and their guardians.

Pahela Baishakh (Bengali New Year), Independence Day, International Mother Language Day, Victory Day and such other national events are observed at the school with participation of students, teachers and villagers.

"This school has been playing a key role in making the youngsters and local people culturally aware," said Nazrul Islam, a guardian of a student.

At the school, teachers also generate awareness in anti-corruption among the students. Everyday students chant the anti-corruption slogan "Durniti korbo na, durniti shobho na," as a part of their lesson.

Each student however, pays Tk 15 per month for tiffin that is provided at school.

According to Aziz, who actively took part in the Liberation War, "Childhood is the appropriate period to instill creativity and help them broaden their outlook. Our devotion to this cause is the reason behind our success," he added.

Every Friday about 200 children from adjacent villages go to the school. The school was named after noted sketch artist Mustafa Aziz.

The school (founded in 1985) was initially housed at a rented place. But as the school faced financial crunch and Aziz failed to pay the monthly rent, it was moved to a tin-shed on his own land in 2002.

There is not enough furniture and light is insufficient in the classrooms. But the shortcomings do not dampen the spirits of the students and teachers.

Marilyn Monroe film footage found in Australia

REUTERS, Canberra

An amateur film of Marilyn Monroe on the set of "Some Like It Hot" has surfaced in Australia almost 50 years after it was shot and is being put up for auction.

Auctioneer Charles Leski said the 2.5-minute-long, 8mm film shows

Monroe and co-star Tony Curtis on the set ahead of shooting a beach scene in which the actress is bouncing balls to get the actor's attention.

The footage, which also shows director Billy Wilder, was taken in early 1959 by a US naval officer who was invited to the set of the movie after Monroe visited his base in San Diego.

The film, in its original Kodak box, was passed on to his daughter who lives in Melbourne, Australia, when he died and she decided to put it up for sale, thinking it may be of some significance to the film world.

"It's been a significant part of the family folklore for many decades but it has been sitting in her drawer for about a decade as she didn't know what to do with it or if it had some broader interest," Leski told Reuters. Earlier this year, a 47-minute amateur film of Monroe and Clark Gable on the set of the 1961 film "The Misfits" sold in the United States for US $60,000 after it was put up for sale by the family of an actor who had a small part in the movie.

Leski said this latest find was older and likely to attract private and public interest with "Some Like It Hot" listed by the American Film Institute as the greatest American comedy film of all time.

"It is colour which is very nice because the film 'Some Like It Hot' is black and white," he said.

"From a documentary point of view there is still great interest in any Marilyn Monroe image, moving or still, or any recording of her voice, as she has been such an iconic presence in the 20th century. Her influence on fashion, film and comedy and many other areas still continues."

Monroe died in August 1962, aged 36, from a drugs overdose.

Aamir reluctant to side with Salman or Shah Rukh

Shah Rukh Khan

The hostility between Salman Khan and Shah Rukh Khan is creating problems for Bollywood stars. Salman has asked his friends to stay away from Shah Rukh. Many stars are in a dilemma attending parties where either of the two Khans is present because being seen with one would annoy the other.

According to sources, Aamir has been avoiding Bollywood parties. It is speculated that he is deliberately missing parties where Shah Rukh or Salman is present. It is rumoured that he doesn't want to be seen taking sides, as both have been his friends.

Aamir Khan was absent from Rani Mukherji's house-warming bash at her Juhu bungalow despite the fact that he made Rani postpone the party, as he was busy on that specific date. Aamir also refused to attend Saif Ali Khan's birthday party.

In particular, Aamir is not attending parties where Shah Rukh is present. According to sources, he wants Salman to act with him in a sequel to the 90's hit comedy flick Andaaz Apna Apna.

The fight between King Khan and Bollywood's macho man has divided Bollywood into two camps. Most Bollywood actors are finding it difficult to maintain healthy relationship with either.
