The RAB official who declined being named said, "Just before Ramadan we decided that some of us (RAB employees) would go out for a meal together. After eating we made our way to a popular ice cream shop in Dhanmondi. There the shop assistant overheard our conversation and realised we were members of RAB. He came up to us and said there was a shooting (there were bullet marks on the floor) and a robbery here a few days ago and his boss even got on a motorcycle and chased the car carrying the miscreants as far as he could but eventually did not report the incident." Again, a story heard all over the city, crimes are committed yet not reported. He continued, "Not wanting to put the

The police can point to their books and say crime is much lower than it was before, but the public by not reporting a lot of crime can rightly say they feel unsafe, because people around them are being mugged and threatened. For this situation to be resolved or even tackled these two parallel plots must be brought together.
