Toxic Milk

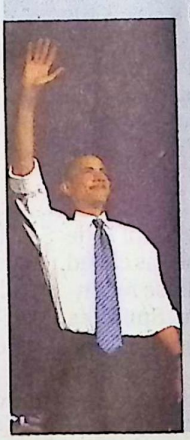

After the horrific milk scandal in China, the notorious substance melamine has been detected in milk sold in the Bangladesh market, causing widespread panic. The discrepancy in test results of the samples, government's lackadaisical response to the crisis has in turn opened up a can of worms. The milk scandal in Bangladesh has revealed the total lack of quality control measures for food products and the overpowering influence of milk powder companies to control the market, even at the cost of public health.

President Obama, I Presume?

Obama's run for the presidency has energised young people in America like never before who see in him not only a break from traditional Washington politics but also a generational change. The era of the Baby Boomers is over. It is a new generation waiting to take control in Washington. An Obama presidency would be just the antidote the world needs after eight toxic years of George W Bush.

The Future of Bangladeshi Business

Business and entrepreneurship will not flourish overnight in Bangladesh, but international business conferences (IBC) such as this offer us an opportunity to bring the world to our doorstep and show them what we have to offer. Investors are more than happy to sink their money into India and China, but why shouldn't Bangladesh get a share of that money? That is a question the DCCI and our business community will try to answer at the mega conference.
