Radharaman's death anniversary observed at ancestral village

IQBAL SIDDIQUEE, Sylhet

"Bhromor koiyyo giya, Sri Krishna bichchheder anoley ango jaye jolia rey bhramar koiyyo giya..." -- the familiar song reverberated in the air of Keshabpur village in Sunamganj district. Radharaman Smriti Sangha organised the daylong programme including a cultural function and more on the occasion of the legendary bard's 92nd death anniversary at his ancestral village last Wednesday.

Radharaman Smrity Sangha President Raja Miah chaired the discussion while Mayor of the Jagannathpur Poura Shabha Abdul Monaf attended the event as chief guest. Former UP chairman Askir Miah and artiste Nuruddin conducted the function.

At the cultural programme, Tania Begum, Ruma Begum, Surat Miah, Harun Miah Dewan and others presented Radharaman songs. The performances were appreciated by several thousand enthusiastic people. A devout soul, Radharaman was born at Keshabpur in 1833. Many of his songs remain popular to date. He is considered to be the "father of Dhamail songs." His father Radhamadhab Dutta was also a poet. Some of his works are "Brahman Geeta," "Bharat Madhabi," "Padma Puran" and "Suryabarta Panchali." Radharaman was the youngest among his sib-Radharaman lost his father in his childhood and came across sages, but failed to earn sympathy from them. He became a disciple of a Vaishnav, Kedarnath Raman Bhattacharya of nearby Rajnagar in Maulvibazar district. Out of his deep devotion to Krishna, Radharaman established an ashram at a remote place by the Naluar Haor, where he composed over a thousand songs. The songs are known as "Radharaman Sangeet." A good number of his songs performed by leading artistes are aired on radio and

TV. The legendary personality died in 1915.
