'Bring back ICL players'

CRICINFO, undated

Javed Miandad, the former Pakistan captain and current director-general of the PCB, has said the board is under a lot of pressure from the public and the media to include ICL players in the national team. Miandad supported the move, and accused the Indian board of "bullying tactics" that have caused players to suffer.

The Indian board had banned the ICL players from playing any representative cricket in and for India, a move that was copied by most other national boards as well. "The BCCI is a very powerful body, but because of its bullying tactics, a lot of people are suffering. All the BCCI needs to do is join hands with ICL," Miandad told Daily News & Analysis, an Indian newspaper. "PCB is under a lot of pressure from the public and the media to include players like Imran Nazir, Rana Naved and Imran Farhat in the team. If there is such talent, why not utilise it? As a cricketer, would like to see these boys in the Pakistan squad."

Another influential name in cricket, Clive Lloyd, the former West Indies captain and the chairman of ICC's cricket committee, also backed a thaw in relations between the official and unauthorised voices of the game. He hoped the IPL and ICL could co-exist, and also believed that similar leagues in West Indies would boost the game in the region.

Miandad also hoped India would tour Pakistan in January, a series that will boost the country's chances of successfully bidding for the postponed Champions Trophylater in 2009.

over by having O'Brien caught at slip, the bowler was on a hattrick in the dreamiest possible circumstances. The new man was Martin, arguably the worst batsman in modern Test cricket, who has made 23 Test ducks, has reached double-figures only against Bangladesh, and averages 2.38. All Johnson had to do was aim at the stumps; his delivery was too short and sailed past Martin's edge. Johnson earned Test best figures of 4 for 30 but it was Clark who wrapped up the innings, which was fitting after he started the job when he picked up Redmond with the first ball of the day.

Redmond tentatively nudged at a short-of-alength delivery he should have left, and edged to slip. Brett Lee soon outsmarted Jamie How, who was bowled reaching at a fullish delivery after successfully driving a similar ball for four earlier in the over.

Lloyd remarks annoys BCCI

CRICINFO, undated

The ICC will look into a complaint from the BCCI against Clive Lloyd, the ICC cricket committee chairman, for suggesting the unrecognised ICL and the IPL, run by the BCCI, should learn to co-exist. However, Haroon Lorgat, the ICC chief executive, said it would first check with Lloyd to understand the context and veracity of the remarks that were reported in an Indian newspaper. Confirming the ICC had received an email from N Srinivasan, the BCCI secretary, on the issue, Lorgat told Cricinfo the ICC would approach the issue in a "fair and appropriate" manner. There was no timeframe involved in the process, he said.

Asked about the ICL during a private visit to Mumbai last week, Lloyd, the former West Indies captain had told Times of India that "there's nothing like having a discussion to break the ice", and suggested the West Indies needed leagues like the ICL and the IPL to revive the game in the country.

The BCCI on Thursday wrote to the ICC seeking action against Lloyd and compared the situation to the stepping down of Sunil Gavaskar as ICC cricket committee chairman earlier this year. Gavaskar was asked by the ICC to choose between his ICC role and that of a media commentator.

Lorgat said he didn't believe the comparison was valid. "We need to first establish if the merits of the case are the same," Lorgat told Cricinfo. "Personally, I don't believe so. We need to just ensure he does not make comments that are not appropriate. And if it is different case we need to establish exactly what the facts are without which it is very difficult to make comments.

The BCCI has adopted a hard-line position against ICL, and banned players associated with it from all forms of official cricket. It has also refused to entertain requests from the ICL for recognition, and pushed for a worldwide ban on players and officials associated with the Twenty 20 league.

Ishant

FROM PAGE 17 confessed he needed to utilise all his skill and sharpness to counter the tall fast bowler.

"The match was on the line, and I knew I was facing an impressive and challenging opponent, and that I needed all my skill and sharpness if I was to survive.

"Sharma was bringing everything back into me, a right-handed batsman, at some speed, a style of bowling I don't see all that often. His pace and accuracy were such that if he bowled a straight one, it had the same effect as a leg-cutter. That was the ball that eventually got me.

"...It was not a quick Perth wicket so I could not trust the bounce enough to try to pull him. At times, I felt I was pinned down his end... but I knew I had the ability to win this duel, I worked very hard to see him off, but on this occasion he was too good for me.

"So many people, including coach Tim Nielsen, commented on how it was an unbelievable spell of bowling. It was a great sport and I was lucky to be a part of it."

Ponting said it was frustrating that the series against India would be accounted in history for its controversies rather than such great moments.

"I guess it's frustrating that when people recall this series, they won't think so much about great cricketing moments such as that spell, but about all the controversy and off-field shenanigans," he said.

A collapse by Zimbabwe of stock market proportions gifted Sri Lanka a leisurely victory here Thursday in the first of a series of five one-day internationals.
