

AMIRUL RAJIV

A very extensive forestation program will be taken up throughout the entire country. Anti-pollution acts would be implemented with proper seriousness. Measures for excavation and saving of rivers like Buriganga and Kopatakkha from pollution will be taken.

Agriculture had been all along the backbone of our real economy. It is a big advantage that the country is in a position to produce almost all the food we need, even under very adverse climatic and disaster-prone situations. It is a matter of regret that the peasants had never been given the due recognition and had always been deprived of proper state patronage.

All sorts of agricultural inputs will be made available in a way that the peasants get these without any hassle and at a reasonable price. Just price of the agro-products will be ensured. A retail market for agricultural products would be set up at suitable places just outside every district town wherever necessary. Sufficient quantities of rice and paddy will be procured by government at a reasonable price to ensure due worth of produce for the growers. This will also ensure enough stock of food with the government for implementation of humanitarian programs as described above.

Land reform programs will be chalked out and implemented in a way that government owned khas lands are distributed to the real landless peasants.

Development of infrastructural facilities and improvement of road communication are an important component for overall growth and for enhancement of quality of life.

To reduce traffic jams and ensure smooth and comfortable transportation inside Dhaka city, new flyovers and roads will be built at different points. Initiatives would be taken to establish a sky train or underground rail.

Bridges will be newly built and the ones under construction ones over Padma and Tista at different places will be completed quickly. Parallel roads will be built along with inter-district highways for slower vehicles like rickshaw van, etc. In addition, a JP government would begin construction of a deep sea port at Kutubdia.

The remaining portion of greater Dhaka protection embankment will be completed. The drainage system of Dhaka city will be improved for getting rid of frequent water logging.

Women and children are the vulnerable section of the population. They are subjected to discrimination and inhuman behavior every now and then. Measures are to be taken for proper protection of women and children and ensure their due rights.

At least 33% positions in JP and also in the government will be filled by women within the next 10 years. Measures will be taken for creating awareness against sexual harassment at work places and educational institutions. All international treaties to safeguard child rights will be implemented. Establishment of child care units will be made
