Iraqi MPs reject law on UK troops Baghdad frees detained officers

BBC ONLINE, AFP, Baghdad

Iraq's parliament has rejected a draft law that would allow troops from the UK, Australia and a number of other countries to remain after 2008.

The bill would have given these foreign forces a legal basis for staying in Iraq once the current United Nations mandate ends on 31 December.

The draft, rejected by 80-68 votes, now goes back to the cabinet for amendment.

US forces are allowed to remain until the end of 2011 under a separate status of forces agreement.

Fariad Rawdouzi, a Kurdish MP, told the BBC that many of his colleagues were not happy with the formulation of the draft law, and wanted it to more closely resemble the deal between the US and Iraq.

Earlier in the week, UK Prime Minister Gordon Brown announced that the UK planned to withdraw its remaining troops from Iraq by the end of July.

Meanwhile, Iraq on Saturday freed 24 security personnel arrested this week on suspicion of aiding terrorism, amid claims their detention was orchestrated by supporters of Prime Minister Nuri al-Maliki.

The interior and defence ministry officers "have all been released and the allegations were dropped," Brigadier General Abdel Karim Khalaf told AFP, without saying when.

"They are patriotic officers. We will take action against the people who made the allegations against them," he said.

Without giving a source, pan-Arab daily newspaper Asharq Al-Awsat said on Saturday that "the arrests were carried out by a special counter-terrorism group supervised personally by Maliki."

The operation "could have been launched by Maliki to weaken his rivals before the provincial elections" scheduled for the end of January, it said, decrying an "atmosphere of political secrecy and rivalry in Iraq."

"It is very difficult for a state to implement that (sanctions) completely, but yes in a way Pakistani government is working to ensure fruitful compliance," he said.

Pakistan acting against Jamaat-ud-Dawa: UN

Pak fight against terrorism not enough, says US

CNN-IBN, IANS, New Delhi/Washington

Pakistan has satisfactorily complied with the UN's sanctions on the Jamaat-ud-Dawa, the Islamic charity group declared a terrorist group by the Security Council, a top UN official has said.

Richard Barrett is the Coordinator of the Security Council established al-Qaeda and Taliban Sanctions Monitoring Committee, which has the task of monitoring sanctions imposed by the Security Council on individuals and organisations declared as terrorist.

Barrett told CNN-IBN in New York that it was difficult to implement the sanctions on the Jamaat completely, but the UN has found all Pakistani agencies were cooperative.

"I don't mind dealing with the officials in Pakistan, whether it is the Government, its elected officials, whether it is the ministries or the intelligence services and army. I found very good atmosphere of cooperation between them as well as with us," Barrett told CNN-IBN.

"It is very difficult for a state to implement that (sanctions) completely, but yes in a way Pakistani government is working to ensure fruitful compliance," he said.

Barrett indicated that the cooperation was across the board, covering civil and military agencies and ministries. Barrett is expected to visit Islamabad soon to make an assessment of Pakistan's actions so far and what more needed to be done.

Barrett had earlier said the Security Council has the power to take action against nations if they are found to be not taking action against individuals and organisations branded as terrorists.

The Associated Press reports the Pakistani Government acting after the United Nations declared the Jamaat a terrorist group and a front for Lashkar-e-Toiba has shuttered all of its offices, arrested scores of activists and put its entire leadership under house arrest.

India blames the Lashkar for the terrorist attacks on Mumbai last month.

But US Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice said on Friday Pakistan has taken some "positive steps" after the Mumbai terror attacks for which India has blamed a Pakistan-based terrorist group but "they are not nearly enough."

During her recent visit to the region to show solidarity with India and ask Pakistan to deal with the terror groups operating from its territory, she found that civilians "were very much in charge and making decisions", Rice said at an event here.

New Thai premier unveils cabinet

AFP, Bangkok

Thailand's new prime minister Abhisit Vejjajiva unveiled his cabinet yesterday aimed at building reconciliation and reviving the economy, but the ministerial line-up has already stoked tensions.

The cabinet list was announced after King Bhumibol Adulyadej signed a royal command approving the ministers, five days after Abhisit won a parliamentary vote to bring a coalition led by the Democrat Party into power.

Heading the economic team is finance minister Korn Chatikavanij, an Oxford temporary of 44-year-old Abhisit who worked for investment bank JPMorgan Chase.

Nine militants killed in Afghanistan

AFP, Kabul/Copenhagen

Eight Taliban-linked militants were killed in a joint operation by Afghan and US-led forces in volatile southern Afghanistan, the interior ministry said yesterday.

The rebels were killed on Friday in Helmand province, which sees some of the worst violence of the insurgency waged by Taliban fighters since the hardline movement was ousted from power in a US-led invasion in late 2001.

Most of the districts in Helmand are said to be under the control of the rebels. The province is also Afghanistan's primary opium-growing region.

In a joint operation by Afghan national police, national army and coalition forces in Helmand... eight of the enemies of peace and stability were killed," the interior ministry said in a statement.

Five other militants were wounded in the battle in Nad Ali district, it added.

Elsewhere in the province, one rebel was killed when a bomb he was planting alongside a road exploded prematurely, the ministry said.

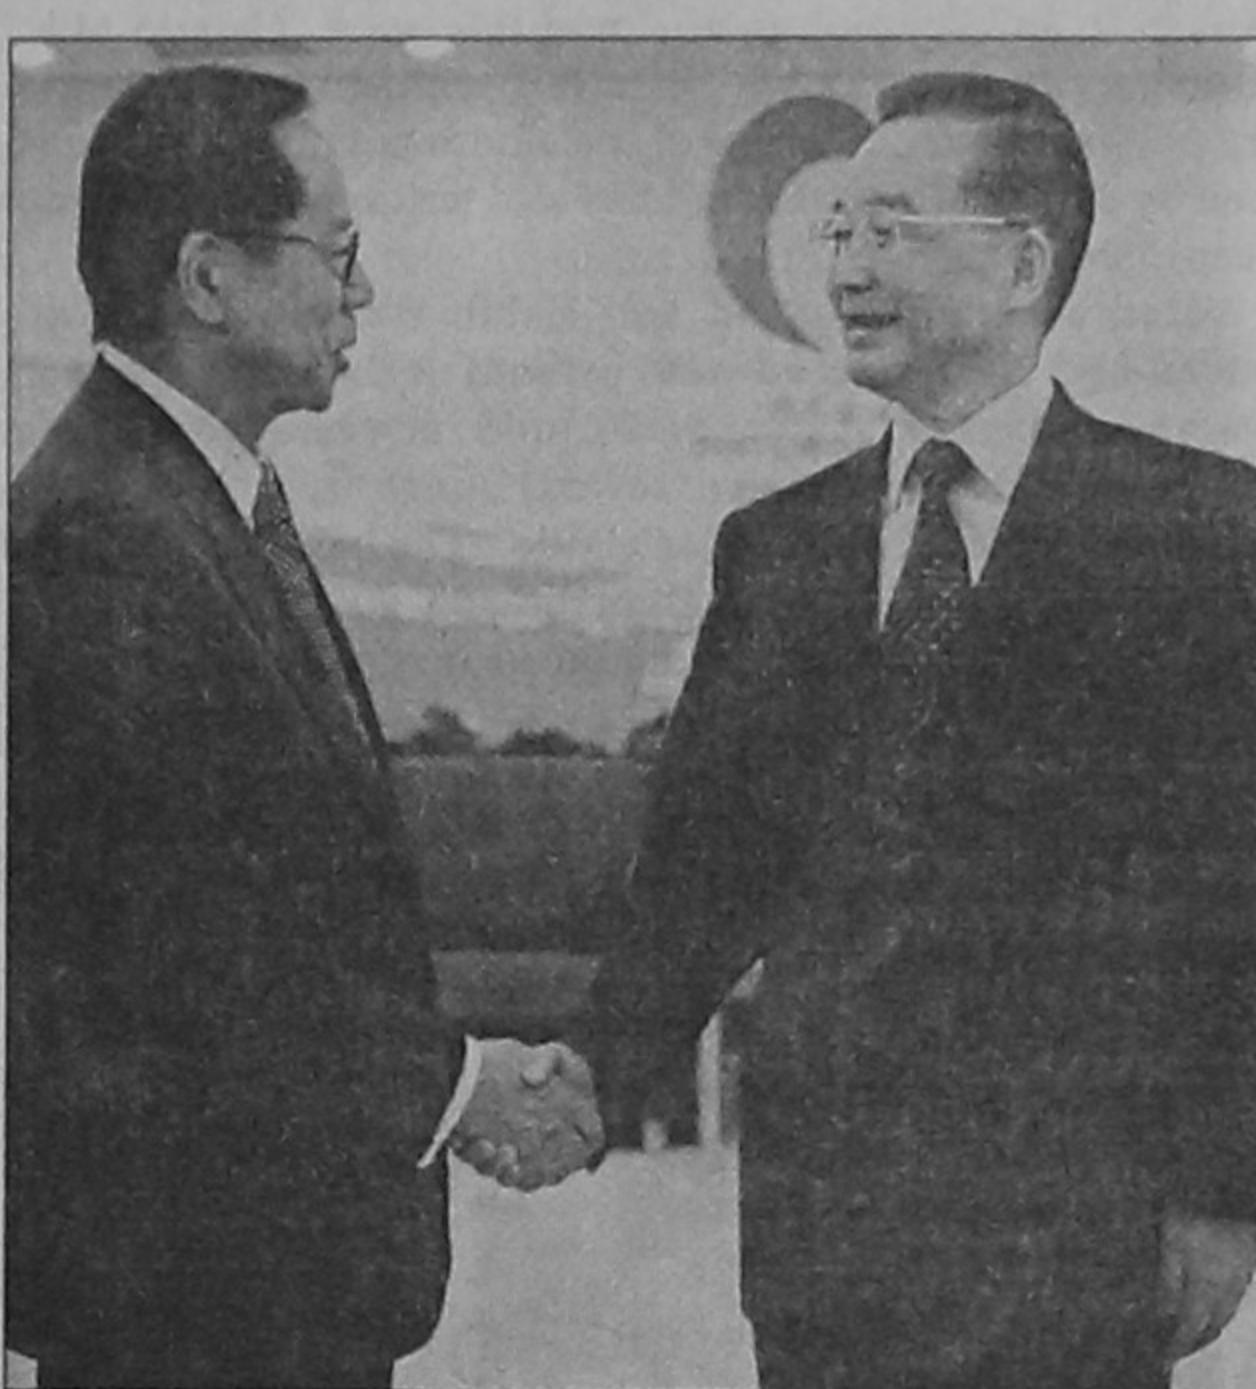

Illinois governor vows to stay in office, fight

AP, Chicago

Facing federal corruption charges that threaten to end his political career, Gov. Rod Blagojevich has made clear to the world what those close to him know well: He's not one to easily fazed.

"I have done nothing wrong. And I'm not going to quit a job that people hired me to do because of false accusations and a political lynch mob," a composed yet combative Blagojevich said Friday, addressing the public for the first time since his arrest 10 days earlier.

"I will fight. I will fight. I will fight until I take my last breath," Blagojevich said. He took no questions from reporters and immediately left the room after wishing his listeners, "Merry Christmas, happy holidays."
