A memorable event at the English Department of BRAC U

Shehrin Nazrul

LIFE is full of delightful surprises and we understood its true meaning on December 3 when there was a grand celebration regarding the inauguration of our new floor and the farewell of the graduating students. It was arranged by the students themselves and for the first time the department was arranging something like this. The party as expected offered us some everlasting memories.

I can certainly remember how the idea had come to us. Tanzia and Faiza came up with the idea and all they needed was an approval from our Dean. Soon organizers and performers got busy with practicing their performances from the very day of the approval and the excitement started building from then onwards. Finally the day came! And the department was looking so colourful; it was nicely decorated with ribbons and balloons, all the girls were clad in sarees, busy taking pictures with their friends and teachers. For some moment it made me feel like the Eid Day. Our programme started with our Dean cutting the ribbon and then the cultural function started. It started with Tagore's poem and one after another performers kept on thrilling us with their overwhelming performances. They performed a couple of songs from traditional Bangla songs to Hindi 'disco 82'. Again the photo session began after the refreshment, which included delicious chocolate cake of course and lasted till 7 in the evening.

There are certain events in life which are simply unforgettable, definitely this was one of them for the students of our department and the photographs that were taken will be remembered through time.

Star Campus - Guidelines for Submission

1. Please abstain from using both American and British spelling convention in the same article/feature/report. Use either of the two.
2. Send your articles in MS-Word (.doc) file only. Relevant pictures should be sent in JPEG form and never in pdf/tif or any other form. We may not accept pictures inserted in MS-Word files.
3. We have been receiving complaints about misspelled names from Teachers, Professors, Vice-Chancellors and other professionals who attend various events at different educational institutes. Writers/reporters are requested to check the spelling of names before mentioning those in their articles. The best way is to ask for a visiting card of the person being mentioned. On receiving further complaints, we may have to stop publishing any more articles/reports from that particular author. Star Campus will not be held responsible for any wrong spelling of names.
4. Star Campus is open to articles and features from all teachers and students from different universities, schools (Grade 9 and 10 only) and colleges in Bangladesh, as well as from Bangladeshi students and teachers studying/teaching abroad. It is a common misconception that we have a set group of writers, which actually is not the case.
5. Because of the overwhelming popularity of Star Campus, we receive hundreds of articles, features, photo features and travelogues. So do not be disappointed if your article does not get published soon after you send it. A good article will surely get published, sooner or later.
6. We encourage articles about events in your institute or thought-provoking articles based on real life scenarios. Because of space constraint, we cannot always entertain poems and short stories sent in by our contributors.
7. For the first time writers, our suggestion is to have your write-up checked by a teacher before sending them to us. We find many articles being sent to us without properly being checked beforehand. Common errors include the usage of small letters for people/organization's names, using '&' in place of 'and' among other things.
