Sarah Kamal (LCP IUB) Shama Islam (LCVP Communication AIUB) and Shariful Islam Bhuiyan (LCVP ICX AIUB).

The objective of the TR track were to introduce the delegates to issue based experience (IBXP) and project management, developing leadership qualities, developing teamwork skills, enhancing functional knowledge, understanding competency management and an overview of AIESEC Bangladesh 2010 visions.

The conference kicked off with a session, which was rather interactive, and delegates shared their experiences and perceptions of AIESEC as an organization followed by personal visions and values, conducted by Sarah.

The day wrapped up with 'Opportunities Ahead', conducted by Fion. This session was mainly about the total structure of AIESEC International, and the positions that are available for members at various stages of their AIESEC Experience both locally and internationally.

The highlight of day 2 was project management and its aspects.

The first session, IBXP taken by Shariful, was mainly about socio-economic, environmental and various other issues affecting the society as a whole.

Next up were the functional block sessions. The block was designed for members to gain knowledge on specific departments like external relations, information systems, exchange specifics and more conducted by a number of facilitators simultaneously, where the delegates were divided into small groups.

The next session was "Finding the Right Issue", conducted by Salman. The objective was to discuss and choose an issue and consider the factors of sustainability and feasibility pertaining to those issues.

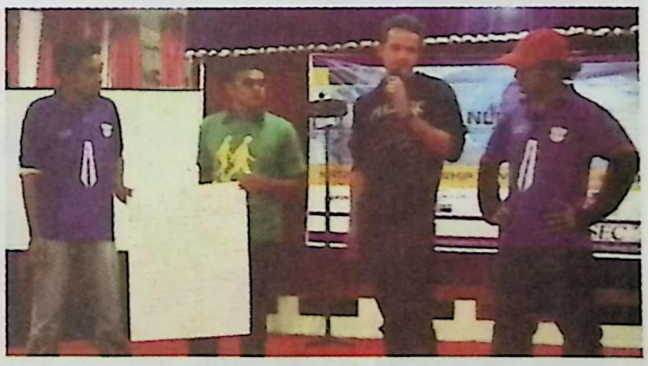

The next session in cue was "Functional Synergy and Project Planning". In this session it was explained how all the different departments interlink with each other, and combine together to form a winning team.

Later the delegates were divided in groups and assigned an issue to solve, keeping the necessary solution routes open. The delegates took part with immense enthusiasm, and in the process learned a lot about practical project running and its various aspects.

After the simulation, a Project fair was held. The different groups were required to present their projects to the audience for the voting of the best project.

The final day was all about Leadership and the various sides to it. The day started with a session called "Emotional Intelligence". This session involved the basics of organizational behavior and how one needs to channel and control their emotions while working in an organization.
