Liberation War memorabilia in disarray at Woodburn Library

PHOTO: STAR

A number of Liberation War memorabilia at Woodburn Public Library have been left uncared for since the display opened in 1992.

HASIBUR RAHMAN BILU, Bogra

father of martyred freedom fighter Abu Sufiyan, officially inaugurated the museum on December 26.

Founder of the museum, Taufiq, told The Daily Star that he started collecting objects and documents related to Liberation War and other memorabilia from different areas of Bogra town and adjacent upazilas in the early '80s. A moving speech by the late theatre icon Selim Al Deen at a Gram Theater conference in Bogra in 1982 inspired Taufiq.

"It took 10 years to collect all the objects and documents that are in this museum. The aim is to inform the post-war generations on the accurate history of our nation," said Taufiq.

The collection of memorabilia includes a manuscript by martyred journalist Chisti Helalur Rahman of Bogra, who was killed on Dhaka University campus in 1971; objects that belonged to Abdul Kader, an anti-Raj activist and other martyred freedom fighters. Unfortunately however, most of the memorabilia are now stockpiled in sacks due to lack of space.

Taufiq bemoaned that he approached the government in 1996 for assistance in preserving the memorabilia under a special project but that has yet to materialise.

Cultural programme to combat social evils

OUR CORRESPONDENT, Satkhira

Rishilpi, a local NGO at Binerpota village in Sadar upazila, held a cultural programme to generate awareness among the people, especially adolescent girls, so that they could combat early marriage and dowry.

'Amar Sonar Paribar,' a project of the NGO, has been arranging cultural programmes, including folk songs, plays and dances since 2003 to address social issues.

The NGO has already staged such laudable programmes at the remote villages in Tala, Assassuni and Sadar upazilas.

Amar Sonar Paribar members also staged a play titled 'Abhishapta Balya Bibaho' (The Curse of Early Marriage) on February 2 at the same venue.

All actors in the play are members of Amar Sonar Paribar.

The programmes have gone a long way in generating awareness against the twin scourges of early marriage and dowry.

Slumdog star in M. Night Shyamalan's next

Dev Patel is going places. The young lanky star of the Oscar-nominated movie "Slumdog Millionaire" will be seen in M Night Shyamalan's "The Last Airbender."

According to Variety, the young lad will feature alongside newcomer Noah Ringer, Nicola Peltz, Jackson Rathbone and Jessica Jade Andress, in the adventure movie, which is based on a Nickelodeon television series.

Variety reported that Shyamalan was already interested in Patel way before "Slumdog" became a phenomenon. But the part Patel was supposed to play was already assigned to Jesse McCartney.

That was until Jesse's second career as a musician got in the way.

Jesse had tour dates that conflicted with a boot camp I always hold on my films, and where the actors here have to train for martial arts," Shyamalan told Variety.

Then Shyamalan saw "Slumdog" and he knew he had his man. "The kid just grew in my eyes," Variety quoted him as saying.

Paramount is set to release "Airbender" on July 2, 2010. Production begins in mid-March in Greenland.
