Peasants in once barren lands of Char Rajpur, Char Chinatoli and Char Kholai Ghat on Teesta River basin in Lalmonirhat Sadar upazila are now busy working at their pumpkin fields as the profitable cultivation brings bright prospect for changing their lot.

Earlier peasants in the char areas of Lalmonirhat district failed to get expected yield from cultivation of other crops and vegetables but soil and climate in the areas have been found to be suitable for growing pumpkin.

In 2006, industrialist Anwarul Islam started pumpkin cultivation on sandy land at Rajpur Char and got good profit. He recruited char peasants to work in his pumpkin field and provided them with necessary training on pump kin cultivation on sandy land.

Following the initiative, a large number of peasants in Rajpur Char area on Teesta River basin started cultivating pumpkin on once abandoned lands in 2007.
