Bangladesh Manabadhikar Natya Parishad (MANAP) is celebrating a three-day theatre festival at the Rabindra Sharobar Mancha. Through plays that envision a Bangladesh of secularism, justice, effective democracy and equal rights, the organisation has been working for the last 10 years in various corners of the country. The festival, which began on March 13, is the third such festival organised by Manabadhikar Natya Parishad.

Seasoned playwright Sayeed Ahmed inaugurated the event by ringing a bell, a symbolic warning against evil. Sultana Kamal, executive director of Ain o Salish Kendra; M. Hamid, president, Bangladesh Group Theatre Federation were also present at the event. Motahar Akand, general secretary of MANAP, welcomed the audience. Kamal Lohani, president of MANAP, presided over the inauguration.

"Theatre should not be treated as mere entertainment. It can be an effective weapon to sharpen human consciousness by inspiring people, sometimes even providing insights to solve social problems," M. Hamid noted.

"Many times, efforts have been made by negative forces to violate basic human rights in our country. We have witnessed war, violence against humanity and often cruelty. However, we still have not lost the power to protest. MANAP does not believe failure to be a natural conclusion. No one can ensure your rights unless you fight for your rights. MANAP works to enable people to fight for their rights," Kamal Lohani said.

Initiated by the Popular Theatre Unit of Ain o Salish Kendra, MANAP set out on its journey in 2001. Organising the young artistes of different villages, MANAP has staged plays to generate awareness about human rights and gender equality among the people at the grassroots level, using the local, cultural history and tradition. MANAP has branches in 70 unions of 12 districts of the country, with almost 1,600 members.

On the first day of the event, Naogaon, Jhenidah, Jaipurhaat and the Gaibandha branch of MANAP staged their plays along with the theatre troupes Prachyanat, Panchabedam and Bottola from Dhaka and Yes theatre troupe from Gazipur. Artistes of MANAP Jhenidah, the first to perform, projected the power of democracy through the lives of a so-called 'wild' clan inhabiting a jungle. The other plays staged at the event also highlighted democracy, transparency, women's rights and human rights in general through the lives of common people.

MANAP will honour actor Khandakar Golam Kader; editor of the women's magazine "Begum", Nurjahan Begum and Language Movement veteran Abdul Matin today, the last day of the festival. Udichi and Subachan Natya Sangsad will also perform today.

Holi celebrated with verve in Dinajpur

KONGKON KARMAKER, Dinajpur

Holi, the colourful Hindu festival, was celebrated recently with traditional verve in Dinajpur and adjacent districts.

Children and adults celebrated the festival with colours and spread the message of joy and brotherhood. They also distributed sweetmeats after offering prayers at temples.

To celebrate Holi, the tiny tots recited rhymes and songs depicting the festival of colours. They also greatly enjoyed spraying each other with colour.

The grand finale of the celebration was lively dances, performed by children of several communities. The teachers enlightened the students about the background of the festival and the harmful effects of chemical colours.

Kanchan Ghosh, president of the Shechhchha Sebak League of Dinajpur, said that although Holi is celebrated throughout the country, the festival of Dinajpur has pride of place.

Holi here is celebrated in a traditional manner where locals participate in the festival with great enthusiasm upholding the significance of the day.
