US to keep up drone attacks in Pak tribal region

Militants' rocket attack kills 10

ANI, AFP, Lahore/Peshawar

US officials have said yesterday that Washington plans to continue with drone attacks in the tribal regions of Pakistan while at least 10 people were killed when militants fired rockets into a town in Pakistan's semi-autonomous Khyber tribal area on Thursday night.

They said that these attacks are being initiated as part of the new US strategy on Pakistan and Afghanistan.

The CIA-operated missile attacks carried by unmanned US aircrafts have attracted worldwide condemnation as both civilian and suspected militants have been killed.

White house sources claimed that under the new strategy, the Obama administration would provide enhanced counter insurgency weaponry to Pakistan military.

However, they added that the attacks would not be extended to the other areas, as claimed by several media reports.

The new strategy also calls for a massive expansion in the US economic and development assistance to Pakistan.

The US is expected to deploy more diplomats and officials to Afghanistan. Two veteran US diplomats Peter Galbraith and Francis Ricciardone Jr. will lead this team.

Last week, President Obama nominated former US military commander Lt. General Karl Eikenberry as the US Ambassador to Afghanistan.

Meanwhile, US officials confirmed that Pakistan and Afghanistan would be at the top of Obama's agenda when he goes to Europe to consult with America's allies.

Obama is expected to announce his new strategy before he leaves for Netherlands on March 31 to attend a 73-nation meeting on Pakistan and Afghanistan.

Earlier at least 10 people were killed and 45 others wounded when militants fired rockets into a town in Pakistan's semi-autonomous Khyber tribal area overnight, officials said Friday.

One paramilitary soldier was wounded when three rockets fired by militants hit their camp late Thursday, a security official said.

EU offers more aid to battle-scarred Lanka

AFP, Brussels/Colombo

The European Commission on Thursday announced an additional three million euros funding for the Red Cross to help tackle the growing humanitarian crisis in Sri Lanka's strife-torn north.

"I am appalled by the humanitarian catastrophe in the north of Sri Lanka. Thousands of civilians trapped in the conflict zone have died and more are dying every day, not only from repeated shelling but also from lack of food, water and medical care," said EU Development Commissioner Louis Michel.

"Only minimal humanitarian assistance is being allowed into the area. There is an immediate and urgent need to act, to save lives and prevent further human tragedy," he added in a statement.

The International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) is the only international humanitarian organisation allowed into the conflict zone and is working "in desperate conditions" to bring life-saving assistance to the people who are trapped and to evacuate the sick and wounded, the Commission said.

United Nations' human rights chief Navi Pillay has said she fears both sides could be guilty of war crimes in the Sri Lanka conflict and that more than 2,800 civilians could have been killed since late January.

India against marking sections of Taliban as 'good' or 'bad'

Cautioning against attempts to draw a line between "good" and "bad" Taliban, India has said that doubts and divergences in the fight against terrorists in Afghanistan would embolden them and weaken the collective willfornations.

Speaking at the UN Security Council, Indian Ambassador Nirupam Sen stressed the need for stability of Afghanistan in the interest of economic progress of the region and asked the international community to collectively fight the threat posed by Taliban and al-Qaeda who are out to undermine the country.

"Doubts, hesitation and divergences in the international community in the fight against terrorists would only weaken the collective will and embolden them," Sen warned the Security Council. He cautioned against attempts to distinguish between "good" and "bad" Taliban and asked the international community to get beyond the "unworkable" efforts of sifting the two.

Upcoming Afghan polls must be 'fair and transparent': UN

AFP, United Nations

The UN special envoy to Afghanistan on Thursday urged the Kabul government to reassure its opposition that upcoming presidential polls will be "fair and transparent" amid expectations of stepped-up fighting by Taliban insurgents.

"The Afghan government must demonstrate that it will do its utmost to reassure the opposition that elections will be fair and will be transparent and that the resources of incumbency will not be misused," Kai Eide told the UN Security Council.

The key political challenge now was to resolve the dispute regarding what will happen between May 22 when President Hamid Karzai's current term expires and the next presidential election scheduled for August 20, the Norwegian head of the UN mission in Afghanistan (UNAMA) noted.

Last Friday, UN chief Ban Ki-moon said the UNAMA mandate, which expires next Monday, should be extended for another year to help ensure credible polls that are seen as a key test of Karzai's rule, as well as seven-year-old US- and Nato-led efforts to stabilise Afghanistan.

The 15-member Security Council was expected to approve the mandate extension early next week.

"The United States sees the upcoming election as a key strategic event in Afghanistan," its UN delegate Rosemary DiCarlo told the council. "We support an open, fair election in which the Afghan people can choose their own leaders free from intimidation."

Congress snubs RJD seat offer

ANI, New Delhi/Hyderabad

Congress has said it was deeply hurt by the deal cut out by its old ally, Rashtriya Janata Dal (RJD), by offering only three out of 40 parliamentary seats in Bihar.

"There is a deep sense of hurt at offering us a paltry three to four seats. Certainly, we as a party are entitled to assert that we should be given many more seats and certainly we do not accept that figure. I think both those stands are fully compatible," said Abhishek Singhvi, party spokesman.

On Tuesday, the RJD and Lok Janshakti Party (LJP) announced a pact with RJD getting 25 seats and LJP 12.

Lalu, however, has underplayed any rift with the Congress.

Meanwhile, Nationalist Congress Party (NCP) said they would not like to have any alliance with the Congress which has been unable to give a seat for a prominent leader in Bihar.

"If Congress-RJD combine cannot even accommodate one of our topmost leader Tariq Anwar from Bihar, I don't see any reason why NCP Party should have any alliance anywhere in this country. I will meet Sharad Pawar and put forward the view," said P.A. Sangma, a NCP leader.

Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP), who has been fielding questions on internal rift over the appointment of businessman Sudhanshu Mittal, seems to have prepared over the controversy.

Says US Admiral

PTI, Washington

Describing India as a "significant strategic partner", a top US naval official today said the dialogue between the two countries in the field of strategic and military relationship is "much healthier, more robust and more vigorous" than what was during the 80s.

"The dialogue today is much healthier; it is more robust; it is more vigorous; it is more comprehensive; it is more forthcoming than that I observed in the mid 1980s," said Admiral Timothy, head of the US Pacific Command or PACOM. Keating, while testifying before the Senate Armed Services Committee, said India is a "significant strategic partner" for the US, the Pacific Command in particular.

India buys Israeli spy satellite

AFP, New Delhi

India has bought a spy satellite from Israel with day-and-night surveillance capability to boost surveillance capabilities in the aftermath of the Mumbai militant attacks, a report said Friday.

The satellite, which can see through clouds and carry out day-and-night all-weather imaging, has been one of the long-standing demands of the Indian military, the NDTV news channel said.
